N. Y. Strikers Defy Leader; Bus System Is Paralyzed

7 Lines Serving 3½ Million Stop As Demonstration Gets Out of Hand

New York, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—A strike on seven bus lines, planned only as a five-hour demonstration, got out of control of union leaders late today and paralyzed a transit system that normally serves 3,500,000 persons a day.

The 8500 drivers employed by the lines split on obeying the orders of Michael Quill, international president of the CIO Transit Workers Union, to return to their buses before the evening rush hour.

Some 2000 men defied his instructions and, according to Quill, threatened violence against those men who did return. (The Associated Press said 3500 drivers voted not to return.—Editor's Note.)

The companies applied for police protection and finally ordered all their buses back to garages. Affected were thousands of persons in Manhattan, the Bronx, Queens and Westchester County.

City Buses Give Aid

Mayor William O'Dwyer ordered rush-hour service on the city-owned subway and bus systems to continue indefinitely to handle the homeward-bound throngs. The seven struck bus companies are privately owned.

Quill was enraged by the defiance of the 2000 men, led by Austin Hogan, president of TWU Local 100 and an arch-rival of Quill within the union. He charged that continuation of the strike was Communist-fostered and said the drivers were being used as "pawns" in order to create confusion before the national elections.

Noting that not only drivers but clerical workers had been threatened by the rebel group, Quill said:

"The responsibility is on their shoulders if they go in for wholesale violence."

The unexpected turn of events came after a confusing day that saw the 8500 drivers abandon their buses at 8:30 a. m., 30 minutes before the strike was scheduled.

A Shout of Protest Heard

The union was demanding that the Public Service Commission grant a permanent increase in bus fares to the seven companies so the employers could make good on retroactive wage obligations and also raise wages in a new contract. The commission met today but, instead of convening in the city as usual, switched its meeting place to Albany.

Nevertheless, Quill called for a demonstration before the Woolworth Building, where the commission has offices.

Mayor O'Dwyer appeared unexpectedly before the thousands of strikers and pleaded with them to return to work.

"I ask you to have patience," he said. "Boys, you can't squeeze blood out of a turnip. You have called it to the attention of the Public Service Commission. Now

Skull of an Ape 20,000,000 Years Old Discovered

Nairobi, Kenya Colony, Oct. 26 (AP).—The British Kenya Expedition reported today discovery of an ape skull 20 million years old, bearing important human characteristics.

Dr. L. S. B. Leakey, leader of the expedition, said the nearly intact skull was found in the Lake Victoria area. The characteristics similar to those of humans were the formation of the forehead and the structure of the eye socket.

The specimen was believed to be the first skull of the Lower Miocene period ever found. Leakey said it upsets existing theories that the characteristics in question did not emerge until millions of years later.

The skull is being flown to London Friday for further expert examination.

The Gallup Poll: Semifinal Roundup

Truman Leading in Only 2 of 24 States In Midwest, Middle Atlantic, New England

ONLY TWO ARE TRUMAN'S—Map based on Gallup Poll shows that President Truman leads Governor Dewey in only 2 of 24 States—Missouri and Rhode Island

Charges Truman Sank To 'New Low' in His 'Like Hitler' Speech

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Chicago, Oct. 26.—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey tonight broke away from his own rule against campaign alley-fighting long enough to charge President Truman with "a new low of mud-slinging."

His ire was aimed at Mr. Truman's speech in this same Chicago Stadium last night likening forces behind Dewey to those behind Hitler, Mussolini and Tojo.

Showers of confetti and ticker tape pelted Governor Dewey's parade from the South Street station to the Stevens Hotel.

Police Chief Ray Crane estimated the street throng at about 125,000. He said a crowd "about the same" size yesterday greeted President Truman's 2-mile procession from the Grand Central station to the Blackstone Hotel.

Fills Chicago Stadium

No attempt was made to match Truman's spectacular night parade, which drew several hundred thousand to the line of march.

But Dewey, like Truman, easily filled the big Chicago Stadium to its more than 24,000 capacity.

Here, in the great hall where Franklin D. Roosevelt was nominated in 1932, and Governor Dewey first was chosen in 1944, the GOP nominee received a rousing welcome.

Two men he is backing to the hilt for reelection—Gov. Dwight Green and Senator C. Wayland Brooks, preceded Dewey on the platform.

Green said the election would be "only half won" unless a Republican House and Senate is returned and urged reelection of the isolationist Brooks as "one of the great statesman of our time."

Brooks in turn laced into Truman.

"Last night we saw the remnants of 16 years of duplicity and deceit," said the Senator. "We saw a man come to portray not only defeat but despair—pleading for division in America . . .

"Think about Harry Truman of Missouri and Alben Barkley of Kentucky talking about civil rights in America."

Dewey was presented by William L. McFetridge, president of International Building Service Employes, one of the few AFL unions supporting Dewey.

Boisterous Cheering

The crowd boisterously cheered every line of his attack on the President and Dewey's pledge not to conduct Truman's "kind of campaign."

"You're an American, that's why," some one bellowed from the galleries.

"That's right and I always will be," Dewey replied.

He paused a moment, and then continued ad libbing.

"I might add," he said, "that

Dewey Is Given Substantial Margin In 18 of Group

(This is the first of two articles presenting the Gallup Poll's semifinal roundup of political sentiments in each of the 24 States. Next Friday the second article will report on presidential standings in the Western, Pacific and Southern States.)

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 26.—With less than a week of the 1948 presidential campaign remaining, the institute's semifinal State-by-State roundup of political sentiment shows this picture for the 24 States in the New England, Middle Atlantic and Midwest sections:

Gov. Thomas E. Dewey holds a marked popular vote advantage in 18 of the 24 States.

President Truman has a substantial lead in one, Rhode Island.

In five other States, where the lead of one candidate over the other is not marked, Dewey leads in four and Truman in one.

Henry A. Wallace, Progressive Party candidate, does better in New York than in any other of the States reported today. His next best States are Connecticut, New Jersey, Minnesota and North Dakota.

In this semifinal roundup, all voters who still are undecided on their presidential choice have been eliminated from calculation of the vote in each State. Two States, Connecticut and Maryland, where previous institute findings showed neither candidate with a substantial margin, now give a marked lead to Dewey.

Delaware has shifted into the marginal category, whereas in the previous poll Dewey held a long lead. In Missouri the latest samplings put the State in the marginal column, whereas earlier surveys gave Truman a substantial lead.

It should be emphasized that these 24 States cover the areas of the country where Republican voting strength usually is greatest. The second half of the States include the Western, Pacific Coast and Southern sections where Democratic candidates normally

Ex-Butcher, 48, Falls 3 Stories To His Death

A man identified by police as Richard McMahon, 48, retired butcher, of 4523 Nebraska ave. nw., plunged three floors to his death last night from the roof of the house at the Nebraska ave. address.

His wife, Mrs. Virginia McMahon, told police they had gone to bed early last night and she awakened to find her husband missing. She searched the house to no avail and then called Dr. Ben B. Chinn, 6141 33d st. nw., who she said had been treating Mr. McMahon for a nervous condition.

Dr. Chinn discovered the man's body lying in the backyard and pronounced him dead.

Police said the man had apparently fallen from the roof of the back porch which was level with the third floor of the house. A railing along the edge of the roof had become loosened at the posts, police said.

GOP Aiming At Light Vote, Says Truman

Charges Polls Used To Convince Public Republicans Have Won

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 26.—President Truman charged here tonight that the Republican Party was using pre-election polls to insure a light vote November 2 by convincing the public it already had won the election.

"These polls," he told 8300 persons in Cleveland's Municipal Auditorium, are like sleeping pills designed to lull the voters into sleeping on election day. You might call them sleeping polls.

"But most of the people are not being fooled. They know sleeping polls are bad for the system. They affect the mind. An overdose could be fatal."

GOP 'Doesn't Understand'

At Toledo this afternoon, Mr. Truman predicted that national security would suffer under a Republican administration because leaders of the GOP did not understand the human basis of national strength. They do not understand, he said, that national defense "begins with the things that make life worth while for the average industrial worker, for the average farm, and for the average small businessman."

"I do not say," the President went on, "that the Republican candidate wants a weak America. I do say that he doesn't know how to get a strong America, and I do say that the Republican Party would not, and could not, let him take those steps which are absolutely necessary to maintain and develop the strength of this Nation."

Then he capped his argument with this statement:

A strong United States is absolutely essential if the world is to remain at peace.

"I hold that it is the solemn duty of the President of the United States to take every possible step that can lead to peace.

"I don't believe in peace at any price—no man does. But I don't

Nationalize Steel, Iron, Britons Told

King Reads Labor Ministry Program To Parliament at Colorful Opening

London, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—King George VI asked Parliament today, in its first state opening in 10 years, to nationalize Britain's $1,400,000,000 iron and steel industry.

The Conservatives immediately served notice they will fight the measure and warned that should it pass, as anticipated, they would return steel to free enterprise if and when they come back to power.

The King, in a joint session marked by medieval pomp and present-day seedy grandeur, read the legislative program prepared by his Labor ministers which also called for:

1. Revision of the Parliament Act of 1911 which permits the House of Lords to delay for two years bills passed by Commons.
2. Stronger armed forces through more energetic recruitment.
3. Organization of civil defense.
4. Better housing conditions.

Harsher Language

The King used somewhat harsher language than the usually innocuous statements by British royalty on foreign affairs when he discussed the Berlin blockade. There was a noticeable rustle among the crimson-robed Lords as he termed it a "difficult situation," and said that "my government hold the view that this action constitutes a threat to peace . . ."

"My government will continue to work closely and harmoniously within the framework of the Treaty of Brussels with other governments which are parties to it, to give full support to the United Nations and strive to fulfill the aims of world peace and well-being set forth in the Charter," he said.

For the occasion the King wore, for the first time since the war, the imperial state crown studded with three of the world's most precious gems and thousands of other diamonds, pearls, rubies and sapphires.

But many peers of the realm, to whom he read his address from the throne, were rented robes of well-worn crimson, trimmed with shabby ermine. There were peeresses in diamond tiaras and priceless furs. And there were peeresses whose long dresses appeared to have seen other Parliaments, whose velvet capes looked well used, and whose heads were adorned with workday hats.

And yet when the great wrought iron gates of Buckingham Palace swung open this morning, Britons' postwar struggles were forced into the background by a shimmering display of pageantry which has no equal.

Cellars Searched

A frosty sun splintered on the burnished breastplates of Horse Guards clattering along in front of and behind the royal carriage, through streets lined with crimson-coated guardsmen in high black bearskin hats.

As the peers filed into their chamber—used also by Commons, whose building was damaged by bombs—the Yeomen Guard poked around the cellars with medieval staves. Back in 1605, Guy Fawkes tried to blow up Parliament, and it has been the duty of yeomen ever since to see that it doesn't happen again.

But pageantry soon was forgotten in Commons, where Deputy Opposition Leader Anthony Eden assailed the government for going ahead with steel nationalization.

"We regard the government's action as ill-judged and ill-timed," Eden said. "We shall do

24 Navy Cargo Planes To Join Berlin Airlift; Shifted From Pacific

1st Direct Naval Participation Will Add 400 Tons to Daily Capacity

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Two squadrons of Navy transport planes were ordered last night to join the Berlin airlift.

The units—equipped with 24 four-engined Douglas Skymasters—will be shifted immediately from the Pacific to begin operations on the Frankfurt-Berlin run. This will be the first direct Navy participation in the aerial supply of the blockaded city.

Triple Crews Assigned

An announcement from Military Air Transport Service said that triple Navy crews will accompany the 24 planes. They are from Squadrons VR-6 and VR-8, Navy air transport squadrons now assigned to MATS.

Addition of the planes will mean that 400 more tons of food or fuel can be flown into Berlin daily in reasonably good weather. The craft are cargo versions of the DC-4 airliners, known to the Navy as R5Ds and to the Air Force as C-54s.

The assignment brings to about 225, the number of four-engined American cargo craft operating with the Combined Airlift Task Force, under Maj. Gen. William H. Tunner. At present some 150 actually are flying into the beleaguered former German capital. The rest are in supporting roles.

Authorized by President

While the addition of the two squadrons marks the first direct Navy participation in the airlift, MATS naval planes have been flying the North Atlantic run in support of Operation Vittles for some time.

Last week, President Truman authorized Gen. Lucius D. Clay, American commander in Europe, to call on the air services for 66 additional four-engined planes. These 24 are the first so assigned.

Dulles Says Red Violence Thwarts U. N.

Charges Global Campaign Waged On Non-Communist Governments

Paris, Oct. 26 (AP).—John Foster Dulles, Republican Party foreign affairs adviser, charged today a general effort is under way throughout the world to overthrow non-Communist governments by "force, coercion and terrorism."

Because of Communist violence, he said, "the United Nations has found it impossible, as yet, to relieve the peoples of the world from the heavy burden of armament and the even heavier burden of fear."

Dulles spoke before the General Assembly's Political Committee as that body began general debate on the Greek question. It was his first major speech on over-all foreign policy.

Arabs Charge Prejudice

Elsewhere in the U. N.:

1. The Arabs accused the Security Council of prejudice at a special session on the Palestine question. Warren R. Austin, United States delegate and October president of the Council, adjourned the session with the angry retort that the Council "cannot be lashed into action by accusations of bias." The Council will meet again Thursday on Palestine.

2. Juan Bramuglia, Argentine Foreign Minister and leader of neutral efforts to mediate the Berlin dispute, studied anew all angles of the situation growing out of yesterday's Soviet veto.

Dulles told the political committee the Greek question and the Berlin dispute were both part of the "general effort" to extend communism throughout the world.

Offers 4-Power Resolution

He offered a four-power resolution calling on the Assembly to extend the life of the U. N. Special Committee on the Balkans for another year so that world opinion can be brought to bear more forcefully on that trouble zone.

The Balkans resolution, sponsored jointly by the United States, Britain, France and China, would call on Greece's three northern neighbors—Albania, Bulgaria and Yugoslavia—to cease all aid to Greek guerillas immediately and cooperate with the commission in its investigation of strife along the border. It also would call on the 58 United Nations to "refrain from any action designed to assist directly or through any other government any armed group fighting against the Greek government."

Dulles warned the Soviet bloc that "if there is continued violation of the Charter, world opinion will grow steadily more condemnatory, more resolute and more potent to restrain aggression."

"Wherever one looks," he said, "whether it be to Europe, Africa, Asia or the Americas, there is apparent the same pattern of effort, namely, the incitement from without of coercion, fear, and violence within to achieve international political objectives."

French Miners Battle Troops' Tank Advance

Grenades, Land Mines Used; 1 Dead, 8 Injured 350 Arrested at Ales

Paris, Oct. 26 (NYHT).—Military troops using tank support cleared four striker-held mines in the Marseille area of southern France yesterday after a pitched battle with strikers who threw up a barrage of gunfire, threw home-made hand grenades and planted land mines to stop them.

At Ales, 50 miles northwest of Marseille, one striker was killed and eight persons—four civilians and four soldiers—were wounded in the most serious fight yet in the government's drive against what it denounces as Cominform-directed sabotage of the French economy.

Military casualties were kept at a minimum by using armored cars to crash through barricades at the mine entrances. The strikers opened fire first, according to a government communique, when troops approached the mine gates.

Several thousand workers, incensed by the news of the fighting, marched forward to surround and occupy the police station, subprefecture and postoffice. But troop reserves on guard there radioed for tanks being held on the town's outskirts. They rumbled into the square and the crowd dispersed.

Police arrested 350 strikers and sympathizers at Ales.

In the northern coal-mining basin, where yesterday 30,000 troops methodically cleared mines without opposition, all was quiet today. About 25 mines in the north have been cleared and security services restored. Ninety more are still held by strikers.

Troubled enough with handling the coal miners' strike, the French government is today faced with new threats from other quarters: a developing possibility of a strike among railwaymen and the support of the miners by General Confederation of Labor dock workers, who are refusing to unload coal imports, which France needs badly to replace the estimated three millions tons she has lost during the miners' strike.

Soviet Bureau Reports Air Pact Repudiated

Berlin, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—The official Soviet news bureau ADN said tonight that Russian authorities had repudiated the four-power agreement on safety regulations in the Berlin air corridor.

The Soviet controller at the four-power safety center signed the letter and sent it to the American, British and French controllers at the center tonight, according to ADN.

The letter, it was explained, was in reply to recent American and British protests against Russian planes violating air safety regulations.

Improper Ratification Held

According to ADN, the Soviet controller held that the air safety agreement was never properly ratified by the Allied Control Council for Germany and therefore is invalid.

Apparently the Russian action, if confirmed, would contain an implied threat to intensify aerial activity along the airlift corridors to blockaded Berlin.

Capt. V. H. Gookin, American controller, said he received a letter from the Russians tonight but that it would not be translated until Wednesday.

"Soviet authorities insist, for the maintenance of air safety, on strict observation of air discipline by British and American planes and also complete schedules of all planes flying over the Soviet zone," the news agency quoted the Soviet controller's letter as saying.

"If these demands are not met, the responsibility for any air accidents in the corridors must rest entirely with British and American air authorities."

American informants reported that Maj. Gen. Walter Schreiber, one of the most important men in the new German police organization in the Russian occupation zone, had deserted to the western sectors of Berlin.

Confidant of Von Paulus

Schreiber is described as a one-time surgeon general in the German army and a confidant of the "Free Germany" army of Gen. Friedrich von Paulus.

It was said that Schreiber was earmarked to take a leading part in the new police force. This force, estimated to number anywhere up to 400,000 men, was trained in Russia and indoctrinated with Communist ideas.

The difficulty the Russians are encountering as the result of their

In Alexandria Court

Barber Acquitted in Slaying Since Victim Had Hemophilia

A 21-year-old barber was acquitted of a murder charge in Alexandria Corporation Court yesterday because the victim was a hemophiliac.

Hemophilia is a condition which causes profuse and uncontrollable bleeding from the slightest wound.

The barber, Richard E. Delaney, was charged with killing Leroy Lovelace, 35, a fellow barber at the Blue Bird barber shop, 404 Princess st., Alexandria, on June 16. Both men lived at 306 N. Fairfax st., Alexandria.

Witnesses said the two barbers and several customers got into an argument over the meaning of the words "intelligence" and "respect."

Delaney and Lovelace were on opposing sides. A struggle ensued, and Delaney struck Lovelace on the side of the neck with his fist, it was testified. Lovelace died a few hours later from internal bleeding.

Dr. Eugene R. Grether, assistant coroner, said Lovelace was a victim of hemophilia and could have died from Delaney's blow or some other cause. Judge William P. Woolls, in acquitting Delaney, observed he apparently had not intended to do Lovelace serious harm and the blow probably would not have caused serious injury to a normal person.

Parochial School Enrollment Rises 7 % in Washington Area

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

Parochial school enrollment in the Archdiocese of Washington, including the District and five Maryland counties, has increased 7 per cent over last year.

Figures supplied yesterday by the Rev. John S. Spence, director of education for the archdiocese, show that 24,526 pupils are attending the 98 parochial elementary and high schools in the area.

Public schools in the same area have an enrollment of 145,363, an increase of 3 per cent over last year's 140,713 total.

Father Spence said the most marked growth has been in the outlying regions of Washington and in Montgomery and Prince Georges counties. In every community except some downtown Washington parishes there has been some increase, he said.

In two parishes where parochial schools are particularly crowded, children are transported by bus from their homes to downtown schools where there is space, it was reported.

Pupils from Assumption Parish in Congress Heights are attending St. Mary's School, 723 5th st. nw., and children from Mount Calvary Parish, Forestville, Md., go to St. Joseph's School, 2d and C sts. ne.

Forming the archdiocese are the District, Prince Georges, Montgomery, Charles, St. Marys and Calvert counties.

Public schools in the outlying areas also have had the greatest attendance increase.

Montgomery County schools, which last year had 18,373 pupils, now have 20,832. Prince Georges County had an enrollment of 22,021 students last year and has 24,398 this year.

Only the District has lost pupils, with 90,886 students this year as compared with 91,533 a year ago. Charles County public school enrollment has grown from 4100 to 4300; St. Marys from 2270 to 2424, and Calvert from 2416 to 2541.

Water, Sewer Lacking

50 Persons in Takoma Park Ordered to Vacate by Nov. 15

About 50 persons occupying Takoma Park flats without running water or sewer connections must move by November 15, the Takoma Park City Council has decreed.

Forced to move are the occupants of the Bonifant Flats on Lake st., between Cockerille and Poplar aves., in the Takoma Park Prince Georges County section. City officials said actual number of families has not been determined.

The wooden, two-story structure, according to Roy P. Frye, city building inspector, was built about 25 years ago, originally for five families.

Present occupants, he said, use open privies which drain into a nearby open creek.

Council action, announced by Mayor John C. Post, followed recommendations of Fire Chief Melvin McBride, City Health Officer Louis B. Burnett, Police Chief C. E. Thomas and Prince Georges Sanitary Engineer C. L. Wood, who termed the building unsafe from the structural and fire, as well as health, standpoint.

Bonifant Flats, city officials said, is owned by Leopold Wagner of 819 Underwood st. nw.

Wagner, in a statement, declared only five families live in the flats, and denied that the privies drain into a creek.

Wagner said he was given 30 days by the Health Department

Canada's 'Mike' Pearson Is an Old Grid Coach Who Made Good in the Field of Diplomacy

In Canada, the civil service can be a "short cut" to a political career. Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King did it. "Mike" Pearson appears to be doing it.

Ex-Envoy Here

"MIKE" PEARSON
Nobody calls him Lester

Toronto, Oct. 26 (Spl.).—Lester B. "Mike" Pearson, former Canadian Ambassador to Washington, today was elected to the House of Commons with a decisive by-election victory in the scattered northern Ontario constituency of Algoma East.

The 51-year-old diplomat gave up his civil service career last month to accept appointment as Secretary of State for External Affairs. Under the Canadian governmental system, he had to win a seat in Parliament in order to retain the Cabinet post.

Pearson was Ambassador to the United States in 1945-6. His appointment as Foreign Affairs Minister tabs him as a potential leader of the Liberal Party and future Prime Minister.

He succeeds Louis St. Laurent, who quit the external affairs post to serve as Acting Prime Minister. St. Laurent will soon succeed Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King.

Pearson will leave Ottawa Friday for Paris, where he will take over leadership of the Canadian delegation to the United Nations.

"Mike" Pearson, former Ambassador to Washington, recently shoved 20 years of civil service security out from under him to take over a rung near the top of the political ladder.

The leadership of Canada's Liberal Party, which presently runs the government, picked out the professional diplomat to be Secretary of State for External Affairs. Yesterday "Mike" also got himself a seat in Parliament in a special election. That's because cabinet members in Canada must also be elected to Parliament.

Human Touch in Diplomacy

Although he has to deal with some of the world's most immaculate morning coats and striped pants, "Mike" held out for a business suit. He prefers people to protocol and has brought a human touch into the starchy field of diplomacy.

The chunky, youthful-looking 51-year-old Foreign Minister has a keen perception of his job.

"The day is gone, or should be gone," he has said, "when a citizen's loyalty to his own country, or a diplomat's loyalty to his own government is enough. It must not now exclude loyalty to the whole community of nations.

"There can be no permanent solution to the problem of the international anarchy of competing and suspicious national sovereignties, the breeding grounds of war, except by the development of this universal community within the United Nations, founded on law and backed by international force."

"Mike" Pearson's was an influential voice in the international conferences which gave birth to the UNRRA, FAO, and the United Nations.

Toronto born, "Mike" was attending the University of Toronto when he took off at 18 to enlist with the British forces and serve in Salonika. He later got a transfer to the Canadian expeditoinary forces—through a direct appeal to the Canadian War Minister—and thereafter got into the Royal Flying Corps after an hour and 40 minutes of training. He crashed during a night flight and was invalided back to Canada.

"Mike" tried his hand with Armour Packing Co. in Chicago, starting in the stockyards and getting up into the sausage department, and then went back to the Toronto University. He won a fellowship to Oxford, and there picked up a master's degree and the "rugger blues" in hockey and lacrosse. He then returned to his alma mater to teach history and coach football.

In 1928, Pearson entered the diplomatic service of the Canadian government, moving quickly up the ranks, serving in various capacities and missions throughout the world. He was Ambassador here in 1945 and 1946.

"Mike" Pearson never lost his love for sports. When he arrived in New York after two years of blitz in the Battle of Britain, "Mike" dodged a welcoming party and rushed over to the Yankee Stadium so he could see the full double-header. In 1943, as minister-counselor with the Canadian Legation in Washington, he organized a softball team which played and beat the State Department team four times in a row.

A Ghost Who Wrote His Own

Married, the father of two children, "Mike" will sit up to all hours of the night to enjoy a conversation or discussion with friends. He himself will talk at any opportunity—particularly to explain the foreign service to Canadians. He has ghosted hundreds of speeches for others, but writes all his own.

"Mike" enjoys the give and take debate. He talks straight, and often in undiplomatic language. In a recent radio round-table, he was being harassed by a participant.

"I suppose, Mr. Ambassador, it might embarrass you to answer this question?" the baiter jeered.

"Indeed it wouldn't," replied "Mike" Pearson. "That's a stupid question and I'm sick and tired of it. I'd like to answer it for once and all." He did, too.

Little White House Now National Shrine

Warm Springs, Ga., Oct. 26 (AP).—The little White House—where Franklin D. Roosevelt died—was given over to the wartime President's fellow countrymen today as a national shrine.

The simple little cottage, filled with personal odds and ends the President cherished, was officially dedicated today by Ivan Allen, chairman of the Warm Springs Memorial Commission.

Austin, Irked By Arabs, Stops Negev Debate

Paris, Oct. 26 (AP).—United States Delegate Warren R. Austin angrily adjourned a United Nations Palestine debate today after Arab speakers accused the Security Council of bias.

Austin, October president of the Council, set the next meeting on the Palestine problem for Thursday.

The delegates were called together today to consider an Egyptian complaint that Israeli forces in the Negev Desert were ignoring the Council's latest cease-fire order.

Egypt and Syria declared the Council appeared to be indifferent to Egypt's complaint. Both pressed strongly for immediate Council action to stop the fighting which they said still was in progress.

Austin replied heatedly:

"In due time and after proper consideration, the Security Council will act. It cannot be lashed into action by accusations of bias."

During the debate, the council heard a strong hint from the Israeli representative, Aubrey S. Eban, that Jewish forces on the Negev front will not be withdrawn to the position they held October 14, the date the fighting broke out. He said the Israeli government could not recreate "the previous tangle and chaos" in the Negev.

Military control of the southern desert area now is held by Israel, "to which that territory legally belongs," he said.

Mahmoud Bey Fawzi of Egypt opened the discussion by asking what the Council "is going to do about the things that are happening at this very moment in the Negev."

Faris el Khouri of Syria declared the Jews "have been using every means to make the world understand that they intend to keep the Negev for themselves—or at least a big part of it."

"They have been encouraged by certain states—even in the Security Council—to entertain such a hope of widening their frontiers and of expanding," Ey Yhouri said.

Under the partition plan approved by the U. N. Assembly November 29, 1947, the Negev was included in the territory given to the proposed Jewish state. Count Folke Bernadotte, slain U. N. mediator, recommended shortly before his death, however, that the Negev be given to the Arabs.

Israeli Won't Return To Former Positions

Tel Aviv, Oct. 26.—The Israeli government will not accept the order of Dr. Ralph J. Bunche, acting mediator, that its army return to positions from which the offensive in the Negev desert was launched two weeks ago, it was learned authoritatively tonight.

The government's answer was transmitted tonight to Aubrey Eban, Israeli Security Council representative in Paris, and will be delivered Wednesday. While tantamount to rejection, it will merely point out that the original Security Council cease-fire order did not include a directive to return to original positions.

Korean Revolt Red-Planned

By the United Press

Official reports to the State Department indicated yesterday that the rebellion in southern Korea was a well-organized affair which had been "planned for some time" by the Korean Communists.

Department Press Officer Michael J. McDermott said the information came from an American diplomatic officer who was sent to Sunchon, center of the uprising, to investigate.

The official reported that the rebels had hoisted the flag of the Communist-dominated North Korean regime during their brief occupation of Sunchon.

"The abundance of printed North Korean flags indicated that the affair had been planned for some time," McDermott quoted the unnamed official. "He also learned that local leaders of the so-called South Korean Labor Party, the principal Communist-front organization in southern Korea, were active during the rebel occupation."

The official said the rebel occupation, which began early last week, was "unbelievably barbaric." He said the insurgents tied police together and murdered them in rows, along with many rightists, Christians and prosperous citizens.

He estimated that up to 500 people were killed in Sunchon alone.

Korean Army Chasing Reds Into Mountains

Seoul, Korea, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Government troops pursued the remnants of Communist revolutionary bands into the rugged Chili Mountains yesterday and continued mopping-up operations in the Yosu area in southern Korea, official sources reported.

But officials warned that if the rebels entrench themselves in the 6000-foot Chilis, the government may be faced with a long and costly campaign.

Mother Plunges From Train

MRS. RUTH COONEY,
a Chicago telephone operator, was severely injured yesterday in a plunge from an Atlanta-bound train 10 miles north of Hopkinsville, Ky. Her 3-year-old son, Robert Cooney, jr., continued without interruption his trip to see his grandmother in Atlanta. Mrs. Cooney told officials she was pushed from the train, but railroad officials, who declined to be quoted, said they believe she opened the wrong door and fell out all that we ran legitimately in this house to resist passage of the bill. Should this measure become a law in the lifetime of the present Parliament, it will, of course, be an issue at the next general election, and I take this occasion to make it absolutely clear that should we be victorious at the polls, we should consider ourselves entirely free to repeal this legislation."

Prime Minister Clement Attlee said he could not understand why the Conservatives insisted this was the "wrong time" to introduce the bill. He said it would be introduced for a first reading Wednesday and that it will be published Friday.

From the opposition bench, Winston Churchill, who is expected to lead a long and bitter fight against steel nationalization, rumbled: "It is the wrong thing to do and the wrong time to do it."

The government hopes to push through the steel bill, then a bill to curb the Lords' veto powers so that the nationalization program will be in effect before the next general elections in 1950.

Amnesia Victim Identified by Name Reading

Philadelphia, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Social worker Margaret Kane sat down with a telephone directory Sunday morning and began reading off names to a bewildered amnesia victim who had been found wandering the day before in Fairmount Park.

She started with the A's and read down the columns—roughly 95 names to a column and 385 names to a page.

By Sunday night, the patient was too tired to listen longer. Yesterday Miss Kane picked up where they had left off. She passed the 100,000 mark, then 200,000 and 250,000 without a glimmer of recognition from her patient.

But on page 659, about 270,000 down the list, she read off the name John J. McMenamin. The amnesia victim leaped to his feet.

"That's my brother John!" he exclaimed.

Police Charge In Tanks, Eject Peru Students

Lima, Peru, Oct. 26 (AP).—Police rammed two army tanks through the doors of the old Colonial Building at San Marcos University today and ejected 83 students who had barricaded themselves inside.

The 83, members of the Aprista-dominated Students' Federation, were arrested without bloodshed.

Students at Gaudalupe High School, largest male national school, who went on strike yesterday also were ousted from the building they had occupied.

The college students occupied the university building at noon yesterday and proclaimed "Zero hour has arrived." Their action apparently was in response to a government statement that "Aprista sectarians, many of whom are strange to university cloisters" were trying to create a rebellious climate in the university, and were spreading rumors that rights under the university statute were to be suspended.

An uprising on October 3 at Callao has been blamed by the government on the Aprista Party, which has been outlawed.

18-Hour Cadet Revolt In Paraguay Crushed

Asuncion, Paraguay, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—At least five military school cadets were killed, many were wounded, and the entire cadet corps was arrested as a result of an abortive uprising which was put down early today.

Loyal troops and the rebellious cadets fought an 18-hour battle, during which mortars and automatic arms were used. Several public and private buildings were heavily damaged and some shops were burned.

Power Lines Cut

Power lines were cut, leaving the city without streetcar or telephone service. Cable companies were able to resume communications with the outside early today.

Among those arrested was the director of the military school, Col. Carlos Montanaro, a brother of Foreign Minister Domingo Montanaro, who is now in Paris heading the Paraguayan delegation to the United Nations Assembly.

An official communique said the movement had been completely crushed. Interior Minister Augusto Zaldivar told the United Press all military garrisons had reaffirmed their loyalty to the government.

Police Fired Upon

Zaldivar said Colonel Montanaro at 1:40 a. m. Monday sent an ultimatum to police headquarters to surrender within 10 minutes. When the time elapsed, he opened fire against the police building, using both light and heavy arms.

After daylong combat, Colonel Montanaro surrendered the military school last night. President Natalicio Gonzalez having guaranteed that the lives of the rebels would be protected.

West Union Seeks North Atlantic Pact

By Walter Kerr

Pairs, Oct. 26 (NYHT).—The five Foreign Ministers of the Western Union states agreed in a two-day conference, which ended here today, to press for the conclusion of a North Atlantic security pact that will include the United States, Canada and possibly other neighboring powers.

Negotiations expected to be started soon will go far beyond the stage of preliminary discussion that characterized informal talks in Washington last summer between the State Department and the European Ambassadors.

The project already has the informal support of United States officials, but there are many problems and details to be worked out and it probably will take some months before the broad alliance can be organized.

Other work, reported in a communique tonight, includes ratification of decisions taken at recent conferences of the Fnance and Defense Ministers of the fice states concerned.

It is understood that broad French plans for some form of economic union have been laid aside for the time being.

The Defense Ministers are believed to have drafted strategic plans for common defense and are known to have created a military staff commitee, headed by Field Marshall Viscount Bernard Law Montgomery.

European observers believe little more than paper work can be accomplished until the United States is brought into the picture. It is hoped that this will be achieved in the formation of a North Atlantic security pact.

Air Pact May Be Repudiated

blockade of Berlin was emphasized today when they complained through their news bureau that the American-British counter-blockade was creating hardships in their zone.

On United States and British orders, the SNB agency said, vital supplies for Russian-occupied territory are being confiscated or turned back by German police on the zonal borders.

Russia Trying to Bluff West And Won't Fight, Says Arnold

Sonoma, Calif., Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Russia is attempting a gigantic bluff against the United States and the Western allies but is "not ready to fight, doesn't want to fight and won't fight" if her bluff is called, Gen. H. H. (Hap) Arnold told the United Press today.

"I've been away from Washington now for a couple of years and I may be slightly off the beam, but that's my considered opinion," the wartime Chief of the Army Air Forces said.

Arnold was asked what positive steps the Western allies might take in the present situation.

"Why not take a motor convoy and push it through the corridor to Berlin?" he replied. "Perhaps we might have learned something from George Patton's technique. If Patton were running the show he would take it through."

Technically Retired

Asked what the Russians would do if an armed allied convoy did push through to Berlin, Arnold replied, "Not much, if anything."

Arnold, now technically retired and raising white-faced cattle on his Rancho El Feliz in California's Valley of the Moon, still maintains an office at the nearby Hamilton Field Air Force installation.

"We need today the same courage of conviction we had when we marched into Berlin," the white-haired general said.

"It would be a grave and basic error to let the Communists bluff us out in the present deadlock in Germany.

"They are not ready to fight and they do not want to fight. We should curb the national tendency to be in awe of the Russians, an awe amounting almost to fear. If our people will take the time coolly to analyze what Russia does and does not possess militarily, America will be greatly heartened.

"Of course, it's easy to lean against the fence rail here in California and call the shots as to what we should do and should not do on the other side of the world. I may be 100 per cent wrong. But I did have direct experience with the Russians under combat conditions throughout the war and to that extent I base my personal opinion and conclusions upon fact.

"The only American in the post-war world to tell the Russians where to get off and make them like it is MacArthur in Tokyo.

"Churchill and Bevin have given Britain an understandable policy with reference to the Communists and have made strong statements the Russians cannot misunderstand—statements that should appeal to every American as they have to every Britisher.

Time With Russians

"We should have an equally clarified policy concerning Russia. Our military policy must of necessity be geared to our foreign policy. How can we intelligently estimate the needs of our new Air Force, our ground forces and our Navy if we are not certain as to the foreign policy they will be required to implement?

"Time plays with the Russians. We have the superior power now. They may have it later. In the meantime, it would be folly to let them bridge the gap by bluff alone. Hitler pulled that stuff 10 years ago. We should now make certain of our objectives, state them so clearly that neither the Russians, our allies, or our own people can misunderstand, and then firmly enforce them. The Russians will not fight today—tomorrow they may if we let them continue to create modern armed power."

4 Former OPA Aides New ECA Consultants

The Economic Cooperation Administration announced last night that it has called in four former OPA officials as consultants at a meeting Monday into prices paid for commodities shipped under the European Recovery Program.

ECA law provides that the recovery agency maintain a constant check to make certain that no supplier of recovery goods for Europe or China charges more than the U. S. or current world price for his product.

Judge Holds Ten For Foiling Red Quiz

Los Angeles, Oct. 26 (AP).—Federal Judge Peirson M. Hall today refused to release from custody 10 witnesses cited for contempt of court in a Federal grand jury inquiry of Communist activities.

Judge Hall, who jailed eight of the witnesses last night and gave the other two temporary liberty to find baby-sitters, said that if every witness before a grand jury could refuse to answer questions "the laws on our books would become mockeries."

Attorney John McTernan, representing the 10, argued for their release pending an appeal on the contempt citations. He said the witnesses intended no lawlessness and added: "There was no showing before the grand jury or this court that these people are members, officers or connected with the Communist Party."

Fear Incrimination

The attorney contended that giving answers to the questions—including one on whether they knew Los Angeles Communist Party officials—might tend to incriminate them because of Communist prosecutions instigated by the United States Attorney General.

Judge Hall said the ten would be held in custody until they expressed willingness to answer the disputed questions. He said defense charges that the Attorney General is acting for political purposes are immaterial. He said the Attorney General and other Federal officers are sworn to carry out their duties.

Challenges Witnesses' Theory

As to the contention that answering the questions would incriminate the witnesses, Judge Hall said:

"There could be no intimidation of any of the witnesses by any of these questions. There is no statute in the United States which makes it a crime to be a member of the Communist Party.

"There is a statute which makes it a crime to advocate overthrow of the Government by force and violence, but guilt is a personal matter. There is no statute which makes the joining of any organization a crime."

The two still at liberty are Mrs. Miriam Brooks Sherman and Mrs. Dorothy Baskin Forest. They were given until Wednesday noon to find attendants for their small children. Others jailed after a court session lasting until almost midnight are Mrs. Margaret I. Noble, Wesley Bissey, Ben Dobbs, Henry Steinberg, Phillip Bock, Delphine Murphy Smith, Frank Edward Alexander and Samuel Harry Kasinowitz.

Journal Reports

Army Clears Gen. Smith of Misconduct

A secret Army report cleared Maj. Gen. Ralph Smith of charges of misconduct in the World War II battle of Saipan, the Infantry Journal said yesterday.

The Journal, an unofficial service publication, revived the wartime "Smith vs. Smith" controversy in an article by Edmund G. Love, Army General Staff historian.

Stating frankly that it was presenting the "Army side" of the dispute, the Journal said it held up publication of the article for one year to avoid damage to armed forces unification.

Up In Memoirs

It added it decided to publish it when it learned that Marine Corps Lieut. Gen. Holland M. (Howling Mad) Smith was going to discuss the subject in his soon-to-be-published memoirs.

The "Battle of the Smiths," who are not related, came into the open when the Marine Smith relieved the Army Smith of command of the Army's Twenty-seventh Division during the Battle of Saipan in June, 1944.

Love said the "unfortunate" publicity the case aroused caused a furor out of all proportion to the facts, virtually demoralized the Twenty-seventh Division, and caused Gen. George C. Marshall, then Army Chief of Staff, to forbid further discussion of the matter.

Marine's Challenge

Despite other reports at the time and since, the Army historian said, the only real question was whether the Twenty-seventh Division was aggressive enough in battle. He said the Marines' Smith asserted that the "Twenty-seventh Division won't fight and Ralph Smith will not make them fight."

The Marine Smith formally charged his Army namesake with ordering a unit of the Twenty-seventh to hold instead of attacking and issuing orders to the 105th Infantry Regiment after it had been taken from his jurisdiction, according to Love.

He said the Army Smith's reply was that he had ordered the unit to hold only until it had time to "reorganize its lines" and then to attack, and that he had not been informed that the 105th Infantry was removed from his command.

Removal Not Justified

Love said that a hitherto secret report of an Army Board appointed to investigate found that although Holland Smith had full authority to relieve Ralph Smith, the former was "not fully informed" about conditions in the Twenty-seventh Division's area and the latter's removal from command "was not justified by the facts."

The board recommended that Ralph Smith's record should not be damaged by his relief, and Love said he was later given new commands in the Pacific and "served with distinction" in the European theater.

The Army historian wound up the "Army case" by quoting an unnamed Army general as having said Holland Smith's intelligence information was "practically nonexistent." He also reported that several Army generals who had been on Saipan said that "under no circumstances would they serve under Holland Smith again."

Rutledge Orders 3 Released on Bail

Supreme Court Justice Rutledge yesterday ordered release on bail of three Denver persons convicted of contempt for refusing to testify concerning asserted Communist connections.

They are Mrs. Jane Rogers and Nancy Wertheimer, sentenced to four months each, and Irving Blau, who received a six-month term.

Rutledge ordered their release under $1000 bond each pending the disposition of appeal to be filed in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver where a hearing on their cases is scheduled for November 29.

Navy Testing New Tailless Jet Fighter

Hailing a year of "unparalleled progress' in naval aviation, the Navy yesterday disclosed it is testing a twin-jet, high speed, tailless fighter.

The radically new Chance-Vought XF7U-1—shaped like the Greek letter delta—now is under flight tests at the Patuxent, Md., naval air test center, it was said.

In a Navy Day review of naval aviation developments during the year, announcement also was made that naval air strength will reach its authorized strength of 14,500 planes by next June 30.

350 Warships Open

While no details were given on the new tailless jet fighter, the Navy said it will hold open house today at its shore bases with other new equipment on view. In 67 ports, 350 warships will be open for public inspection, and 130 admirals will make addresses. Since 1922, Navy Day has been observed each October 27.

Summing up the progress in naval aviation, the Navy cited the introduction of jet planes aboard aircraft carriers and approval of the new 65,000-ton super carrier as the main events of the year.

Exercises held in both oceans during the past year "proved that jet aircraft are practical for carrier operation," and proved that jets will "play an increasingly major role in modern carrier warfare," said the Navy.

"Still newer" jet planes now are beginning to roll off assembly lines to replace these first carrier-based jet fighters, it was said. Mentioned were the Grumman F-9F Panther and the McDonnell F-2H Banshee. Besides the XF7U-1, the Navy also told of another experimental jet fighter, now under test at Muroc Dry Lake, Calif. This is the Douglas XF3D-1 Skynight, an all-weather plane "expected to be one of the most versatile of jet aircraft."

New Flying Boat

Some details also were given on a new streamlined experimental flying boat, Consolidated Vultee's XPY5Y-1, a patrol plane which is nearing completion. It is powered by four gas turbine engines. Another development in the field is Martin's XP5M-1, a twin-engine patrol craft of advanced design.

Three new carrier-based bombers also were unveiled during the year. Most radical is the North American XAJ-1, first Navy jet-powered attack bomber, which is capable of long-range, high-speed missions. The experimental craft has two conventional piston engines for long cruising and a jet engine for high-speed bursts in combat.

Douglas' AD-1 Skyraider and Martin's AM-1 Mauler, the other two new carrier bombers, joined the fleet during the year. The latter is powered by the world's most powerful reciprocating engine, a 3000-horsepower Pratt and Whitney.

Draft Boards Screen 1300, Put 1100 in 1-A; Chief Gives Them a Vacation Until Nov. 12

The District's 15 draft boards have classified so many men 1-A that William E. Leahy, local Selective Service director, has asked them to take a vacation until November 12.

Of some 1300 Washington draft registrants already classified, the boards have pinned the 1-A tag (available for military service) on about 1100 of them, Lieut. Col. Walter S. Welch, chief of the manpower division, disclosed yesterday.

While from 60 to 75 per cent are expected to fail preinduction physical and mental examinations, enough will be "salvaged" to meet the Army's calls for the next three months, Colonel Welch said.

The first Washingtonians to be drafted under the peacetime Selective Service Law will enter the Army next Tuesday, when seven 1-A registrants report to the Army and Air Force recruiting station here at 8:30 a. m. They were:

William M. Mumaw, 2457 Tunlaw rd. nw., grocery store employe; Jesse S. Bowen, 1331 22d st. nw., driver; Leonard L. Lewis, 1827 Kalorama rd. nw., postoffice laborer; Aurelio B. Collado, 3115 Quesada st. nw., salesman.

William I. Lee, 1624 S st. nw., bartender; Charles A. Reese, 1727 Massachusetts ave. nw., Army clerk, and Quintin A. Hill, 1763 Willard st. nw., clerk.

Draftees Can Retain Job Rights 3 Years

Draftees may serve in the Armed Forces as long as three years without losing claim to their civilian jobs, the Veterans' Reemployment Rights Bureau said yesterday.

The new Selective Service Act, which became effective June 24, provides for an enlistment of not more than three years, said Robert K. Salyers, director of the Bureau. The draft induction period is for 21 months.

"An inductee, after serving 21 months, may without loss of reemployment rights extend his period of active duty for a maximum of 15 months, provided there is no break in the continuity of his service," Salyers said.

Reenlistment after that would cost the veteran his hold on the job he filled in civilian life, Salyers said.

CIO Union Sues Atom Board, GE for Million Over Contract

The CIO Electrical Workers Union yesterday sued the Atomic Energy Commission and the General Electric Co. for one million dollars damages.

The action filed in United States District Court here is based upon the refusal of Chairman David E. Lilienthal of the commission to recognize the union's contract in a General Electric laboratory at Schenectady, N. Y.

Lilienthal has ruled the union will not be recognized at the new Knolls (Schenectady) plant and will be ousted from other plants unless the union's officials take the Taft-Hartley oath that they are not members of, or affiliated with, the Communist Party.

The suit, in addition to seeking money damages, asks a court order barring the commission and the company from disturbing its contract as the exclusive collective bargaining agency for workers in General Electric plants. General Electric has a commission contract to operate the Knolls plant.

The suit was filed by President Albert J. Fitzgerald of the CIO United Electrical, Radio, and Machine Workers of America, and Leo Jandreau, president of the union's District 3 in which Schenectady is located.

It named as defendants Chairman Lilienthal, the Atomic Energy Commission itself, all of its members, and the General Electric Co.

Void ITU Stay, Plea to Court

The Government yesterday asked the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago to cancel its stay of contempt of court order against the AFL International Typographical Union.

National Labor Relations Board attorneys also asked the Circuit Court to dismiss the ITU's appeal from the contempt conviction.

They said the appeal from a Federal district court was "frivolous" and the contempt order should be made effective immediately in the "public interest."

go back to work and get the children home from school and the people home from their jobs."

Quill then stepped to the microphone and shouted:

"Okay, boys—Get the buses rolling."

There was a shout of protest and Quill said:

"Are you going to follow the leadership of your union?"

Cries of "no" were about evenly divided with "yes" in the response, but Quill ordered the men back.

But the "rebels" remained and held a meeting of their own, addressed by Hogan. They voted overwhelmingly to stay on strike and went out to persuade others not to return.

Quill admitted that the strike had been planned only as a brief demonstration and said the union intended all along to get the drivers back at work during the afternoon.

The companies said they had no alternative but to halt service so long as violence was threatened.

Court Bars Picketing At Gulf Shipyards

New Orleans, Oct 26 (AP).—Two West Coast maritime unions were restrained today from picketing ship repair work at Gulf yards.

U. S. District Judge Wayne Borah issued the temporary injunction against the Pacific Coast Marine Firemen, Oilers, Water Tenders and Wipers Association (Ind.) and the National Union of Maritime Cooks and Stewards (CIO). The ruling had been asked by the National Labor Relations Board on charges of secondary boycott.

The NLRB claimed picketing at Gulf shipyards of struck ships being repaired for return to the Maritime Commission under charter contract is an unfair labor practice intended to further progress of the eight-week-old West Coast maritime strike.

40 Huge Trailer Trucks Stage 'Park-Down' Strike

Carlisle, Pa., Oct. 26 (AP).—Drivers of 40 huge trailer trucks staged a "park-down" strike near here tonight.

More than $1,600,000 in freight consigned by the Daniels Motor Freight Co., Warren, Ohio, to New York and Philadelphia points was tied up in the stoppage.

"We're here until we get satisfaction from the company," said a driver who declined to be quoted by name. He said the dispute arose when the company dismissed one of the men last week for his refusal to handle "special point freight," which involves stopovers at way points and takes more time than through freight, it was explained. The truckers depend on fast runs and a greater turnover of loads to increase their earnings.

Georgia Pickets Block Celanese Firm Reopening

Rome, Ga., Oct. 26 (AP).—More than 1500 pickets halted the Celanese Corp.'s efforts to reopen its strikebound plant on the city's outskirts today. The strike has been in progress for 73 days.

Reporter John Scarborough of the Rome News-Tribune, who is also a free-lance photographer, reported that a dozen or more of the pickets surrounded and struck him early today and then forced him to leave the plant area.

A CIO organizer, Truman Henderson, said the strikers were angered when Scarborough appeared carrying a camera and a pistol.

Thomas Is Granted Nov. 4 to Testify

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Representative J. Parnell Thomas (R., N. J.) was notified yesterday that a Federal grand jury here would grant his request to appear before it November 4 in answer to charges he received salary "kickbacks" from employes.

Thomas, chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, has not yet said what his answer will be to the grand jury's offer of the privilege to appear before it.

Running for reelection, Thomas had asked for the date of November 4, two days after the election on Tuesday.

"Kickback" Charges Probed

The grand jury is currently inquiring into charges that Thomas put certain individuals on his congressional office payroll and then pocketed all or part of their salaries.

One witness scheduled yesterday but not heard was Mrs. Helen Campbell his first secretary in 1940.

United States District Attorney George Morris Fay notified Thomas of the grand jury decision in a letter to the Republican Congressman's attorney, Walter Back of Hackensack, N. J.

Fay said the Government had receipt of the letter from Fay but said he had no statement to make at that time.

Meanwhile a spokesman for Thomas charged yesterday that some committee files in the office of the Congressman had been rifled. The statement was made by his secretary, Mrs. Vera Lewis.

Committee members have previously told reporters that the Congressman's personal files were removed from his office.

recommended to the grand jury that Thomas' request to appear be granted. In demanding the right to appear, Thomas charged that Attorney General Tom C. Clark had prompted the investigation to injure him politically.

Dewey Blamed For Congress

Paterson, N. J., Oct. 26 (AP).—After a rousing reception at Trenton, New Jersey's capital city, Democratic vice-presidential candidate Alben W. Barkley tonight carried his campaign to this industrial center.

In a speech prepared for delivery at Central High School, the Kentucky Senator said Gov. Thomas E. Dewey must be held responsible for the policies of the Eightieth Republican Congress because the Republican presidential candidate indorsed its record "1000 per cent."

Barkley said in all his 35 years in Congress, "I have never seen a Congres more intent on serving the desires of special privilege and less interested in serving the needs of the masses of the people of the United States."

Barkley addressed a Trenton crowd estimated by police at over 2000 equalling if not bettering the turnout for his opponent, Gov. Earl Warren of California October 1.

Republican Governor Driscoll allowed time off for all State employes who wished to hear Barkley.

Barkley, speaking from the State House steps, drew a 45-minute comparison of 16 years of the New Deal and the 12 preceding Republican years.

County Probes Kerr Spending

Oklahoma City, Oct. 26 (AP).—Warren Edwards, Oklahoma county attorney, said today he is "making a thorough investigation" of primary campaign expenditures by former Gov. Robert S. Kerr, the Democratic United States senatorial nominee.

B. Nelson Deranian, counsel for a Senate subcommittee, said in a report last week that at least $65,000 was spent in Kerr's behalf in July primary and runoff campaigns.

A ceiling of $3000 for each of the two primaries or a total of $6000 is placed by Oklahoma law.

Why Millions Like
CHEWING-GUM LAXATIVE

At last a laxative so pleasant, so different, that it has won millions who now refuse to take harsh, stomach-punishing laxatives!

FEEN-A-MINT tastes like delicious, mint-flavored chewing gum. And you chew it like gum! And scientists say chewing makes FEEN-A-MINT's fine medicine more effective—"readies" it so it flows gently and gradually into the system.

And here's the amazing thing! The action of FEEN-A-MINT's special medicine DETOURS the stomach. It doesn't act while in the stomach, but only when farther along in the lower digestive tract . . . where it should! Thus, FEEN-A-MINT won't upset the stomach!

Try FEEN-A-MINT—at any drug counter—for 25¢, 50¢ or only 10¢

Thomas Backs Israel for U. N.

New York, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, tonight called for de jure recognition of Israel and its inclusion in the United Nations.

"Obviously the United Nations, on the face of its own record and the march of events, must solve the problem (of Palestine) in terms of the de jure recognition of Israel and its inclusion in the U. N.," Thomas said. "Of course, Israel must be given complete power over immigration into its territory. It is moreover, necessary that those territories be sufficient to guarantee it an economic chance of existence."

Thomas said that a preponderance of evidence is against the late Count Folke Bernadotte's suggestion of turning over the Negev to the Arabs.

"Any desirable plan must take account of the long-range necessity of bringing about peaceful relations in the Middle East and do what can be done to that end," Thomas said. "Today, I think that Israel could win a war against the Arabs, but in the suffering and confusion, the ideals of democracy and world peace itself would greatly suffer. It is only communism that can fish advantageously in the muddy—no the bloody—waters of war."

Wallace Says Party Blocked Third War

New York, Oct. 26 (U.P.)—Henry A. Wallace said tonight that his third party campaign had prevented World War III.

In a speech prepared for delivery at a mass rally in Madison Square Garden, Wallace pledged that his Progressive Party would carry on after the November 2 election and predicted that it eventually would force the Republicans and Democrats to merge into a single party.

Tonight's was Wallace's last appearance before a city-wide rally in New York City, where he has his greatest strength. Admission tickets cost from 60 cents to $3.60. President Truman speaks in the Garden Thursday night, with admission prices running from 50 cents to $2, and Gov. Thomas E. Dewey addresses a rally here Saturday night with free admission.

Accomplishments Claimed

Wallace claimed that the Progressive Party had protected the new state of Israel, had stopped the Mundt-Nixon bill in Congress and prevented passage of a universal military training bill.

"But above all," he said, "we have stopped the cold war in its tracks.

"We have delayed its progress. We have thrown it out of gear.

"We have gained time to reform the forces of peace, here in the United States and in all the nations of the earth—and we shall win this fight.

"There shall be no war. Ours is an historic accomplishment."

"Sham Battles Over"

The growth and strength of his "Gideon's army" has been concealed by the "paper curtain" of the American press, Wallace said. He predicted that the Progressive Party would live after the Gallup and Fortune polls are just a memory.

"Everywhere in the Nation the people's party will force the two degenerate parties to unite outwardly as they have long been united inwardly," he said. "The days of sham political battles between sham political parties are over.

"At the next congressional elections, the American Labor Party in this State and the Progressive Party nationally hope to put up candidates in every congressional district in this broad land of ours."

Singer Paul Robeson presided at the rally. Other speakers included Representatives Vito Marcantonio and Leo Isacson, both running for reelection to Congress; C. B. Baldwin, Wallace's campaign manager; Albert J. Fitzgerald, president of the United Electrical Workers (CIO), and O. John Rogge, discharged from the Justice Department and now running on the Progressive Party ticket for a New York judgeship.

Warren Lauds Dewey in California

En route with Governor Warren, Oct. 27 (U.P.)—Gov. Earl Warren campaigned through his home State of California today, but devoted most of his talks to his running mate, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey.

The California Governor praised Dewey as a great American in speeches at San Bernardino, Colton and Riverside, Calif. He said Dewey would not offer any "patent medicine" remedies for the Nation's troubles.

Warren was greeted by crowds ranging up to 5000 persons at San Bernadino. There he reemphasized his campaign theme that the Democratic Administration had outlived its usefulness after a 16-year regime.

In San Bernardino, he also called for the election of Republican Lowell Lathrop over Representative Harry Sheppard, Democrat.

Pros, Cons Clash Again On Charter

Backers and opponents of the Montgomery County charter movement tangled yesterday over legal questions that might arise after the November 2 election.

Nine attorneys predicted that approval of the proposed change to a county council-manager form of government would lead to "confusion and uncertainty in county affairs," and charter supporters promptly branded their statements as "patently distorted."

Democratic attorneys James C. Christopher, Emory H. Bogley, Charles W. Prettyman, Donald A. DeLashmutt, Joseph M. Mathias, David E. Betts and V. O. Bourdeaux issued a statement asserting a recent Maryland Court of Appeals ruling did not pass on the validity of the entire home-rule document and quoted the court's opinion saying, "We are deciding none of the questions that conceivably may arise as to the validity, construction or application of varied provisions of the proposed charter."

Col. Norman B. Ames, president of the County Charter Committee, replied, "Charter opponents are grossly misrepresenting the situation when they claim the charter would open the door to any unusual litigation. The fact is the court ruled 100 per cent for the charter on the point raised."

A statement similar to that of the seven attorneys was put out by F. Bernard Welsh, a Republican and legal counsel to the county commissioners, and Robert Peter, Democrat and former State Senator. They warned charter approval would lead to much litigation.

"The charter is carefully drafted, legally sound basic law for Montgomery County," retorted Ames. "The campaign to undermine confidence in it is a last-minute attempt to confuse the citizens."

AEC May Aid Woman With Cancer in London

Oak Ridge, Tenn., Oct. 26 (AP).—If British medical authorities approve the request, the Atomic Energy Commission will send a radioactive substance to London for treatment of a woman believed dying of brain cancer.

An AEC spokesman said the appeal of Jack Davis, New York theater owner, for radioactive sodium acid phosphate for his daughter, Iris Davis, had been received.

"The request was turned over to the United Kingdom scientific office in Washington, which has cabled the Medical Research Council in London to determine the status of the case," the spokesman said. If the two groups approve the request, he said, the radioactive element will be sent to London.

Folsom Gets Jolt In Truman Drive

Gov. James E. Folsom of Alabama, struck a legal road block yesterday in his attempt to get President Truman's name on the ballot in Alabama in time for the November 2 election.

Governor Folsom explained that the 11 Democratic electors on the Alabama ballot are pledged to vote for Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, of South Carolina, States' Rights presidential candidate. He said he had hoped to obtain Supreme Court action to force States' Rights candidates to run on a separate line instead of under the traditional rooster emblem of the regular Democratic Party.

Advised by his attorneys that the Supreme Court cannot take original jurisdiction on the matter, Governor Folsom said he would attempt through Alabama's courts after the election to force the 11 Democratic Party electors to vote for President Truman.

Thurmond Carries Fight to Arkansas

Fayetteville, Ark., Oct. 26 (AP).—States' rights are the "only guarantee we have that a Kremlin will not be established in Washington," Gov. J. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina said tonight.

The States' Rights Democrats' candidate added that through power reserved to States under the Federal Constitution "men like Thomas Jefferson made it certain that power could never be taken away from the people.

"And yet we Americans have witnessed a wholesale assault upon the principle of local self-government in this political year of 1948," he said in a prepared address.

Tractor-Trailer Driver Killed in Fairfax Accident

William S. Utterback, 28, of Purcellville, Va., was killed instantly last night when his tractor-trailer truck was in an accident 8 miles west of Fairfax, Va., police reported.

Utterback, father of three, was hauling a load of cattle on Route 211 when the accident occured.

Fairfax police who investigated the accident also had to assist in rounding up several cattle which had escaped.

Ruth Crane to Talk To Chest Group

Ruth Crane, president of the National Association of Women Broadcasters, will address the Campaign Progress dinner of the Prince Georges Community Chest Monday at 6:45 p.m. at First Methodist Church, Hyattsville.

W. Carroll Beatty, chairman of the Chest campaign, announced that a puppet show will be presented by school pupils. He urged that returns be made at this meeting if possible by all campaigners.

Brice D. Duckett, assistant treasurer of the Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co., was named chairman of the Area 5 of the campaign, which include Kent, Bowie and Queen Anne election districts.

1 Chain Slashes Butter 2 Cents, Another Cut Due

Butter prices in one large Washington chain outlet yesterday dropped 2 cents on the pound, to the lowest level this year.

The supermarket announced that a further reduction of 2 cents will become effective today—putting the price at 70 cents for one-pound solid prints and 71 cents for the quarter pound packages. The butter is 93-score.

Another chain, with about 150 stores in the Washington area, also will slash prices 2 cents this morning—to 73 cents for a pound of 93-score and 71 cents for 92-score, in quarter-pound sticks.

The cut in prices here reflected a drop in wholesale prices—to the lowest point since June 10, 1947. Grade "AA" slid to 62 cents a pound in New York, compared with 60 cents on June 10, 1947.

Police Raids on Wallaceite Rallies Called 'Despicable'

A resolution, branding "despicable" the police raiding parties which early this month broke up two meetings of Henry Wallace supporters, drew the roaring approval of more than 2000 last night at Turner's Arena.

The resolution asserted that police "unconstitutionally" invaded a private home here without warrant on October 2 "for no other reason than that there were both white people and Negroes assembled." Another meeting of white and Negro veterans was broken up October 9, the resolution continued, "on the flimsy pretext that liquor was being sold and raffled."

The resolution called for: (1) President Truman to take immediate action to protect the civil rights of District residents, and (2) for the incoming Congress to enact suffrage for the District early in 1949.

The resolution was read by Sam Schmerler, executive secretary of the District Progressive Party. It carried without a dissenting voice.

Truman Accused Of 'Mud-Slinging'

after the election is over we are all going to draw together regardless of how we have voted to be a great united country again."

Dewey, who wholeheartedly indorsed both Green and Brooks when he first entered Illinois nearly a month ago, did not mention either in tonight's major speech. But he greeted both cordially when he appeared on the stand.

Governor Dewey obviously was having trouble maintaining his aloof, "high-level" pose in the face of the blunt Truman appeal to racial and religious groups.

For the first time during the campaign, reporters noted some traces of anxiety aboard the Dewey train, mingled with outspoken relief that the campaign has only one week to run.

Aside from his blast at Truman, violating his own advice against "replying in kind" to the President's bitter thrusts, Dewey followed the unity line his coaches still say will win for him in a walk.

The Governor was almost literally walking down the last stretch, making only one rear platform talk into Chicago, and scheduling none en route to Cleveland tomorrow.

Only One Platform Appearance

But at Elkhart, Ind., his only rear platform appearance of the day, he couldn't resist another poke at the President.

A woman in the crowd of a few hundred suggested Dewey come back to Elkhart Wednesday, saying he had just taken a "lambasting" from the President, heading east.

"Nobody believes that stuff anyway, do they?" replied Dewey, adding, "including the people who are saying it."

A man in the crowd said Mr. Truman "told us he was going to get housing."

"You mean better than he has done in the past," laughed Dewey. "That would be something—wouldn't it?"

No Elkhart speech had been scheduled, and Governor Dewey told the crowd he really hadn't expected anyone at the depot. Before his train pulled away he called Mrs. Dewey out on the rear platform and presented her and indulged in light banter with the crowd.

But if Dewey walked, his campaign special practically flew into Chicago. At one point, some 25 miles west of Toledo, Mr. Dewey's train speeding west flashed by President's Truman's special, heading in the other direction.

There was no time for an exchange of Bronx cheers or even an extended tongue.

Speaks at Chicago

Governor Dewey attended to the latter tonight at Chicago.

He charged Harry Truman and Alben Barkley, "faced with failure, with their party split in all directions" are now spreading "fantastic fears among our people."

"They are openly sneering at the ancient American ideal of a free and united people," he said. "They have attempted to promote antagonism and prejudice.

"They have scattered reckless abuse along the entire right of way from coast to coast and have now, I am sorry to say, reached a new low of mud-slinging.

"I know that you regret as much as I do that this should happen. That is the kind of campaign I refuse to wage."

Once again he hammered the "sad record" of the Truman Administration and blistered its failure "to win the peace."

He charged "millions upon millions of people have been delivered into Soviet slavery while our own Administration has tried appeasement on one day and bluster the next."

He promised "new and better leadership," a Government that leads from strength "to build peace in the world," plus these changes in Washington: competence, a quiet devotion to duty, and a decent and honorable respect for the rights of all Americans."

Then, in this "hog-butcher" metropolis, where city labor processes what the farmer produces and big business flourishes alongside of small, he repeated his program for all three components — labor, business and agriculture.

He promised the farmer:

Better and more liberal technical services for soil conservation and preservation of natural resources, a long-range price support program for which he claimed credit and a "solid, steady, long-range food production for this country—above and beyond partisanship."

He promised the small businessman:

A Government with both "a heart and a head," that will encourage small enterprise, lift the "burdens of nuisance and harassment," but "fairly and vigorously enforce the laws protecting our people from the evils of business monopoly."

And he promised labor:

An Administration that "believes wholeheartedly in the right to organize, to strike, the right to collective bargaining . . . which recognizes labor's rights as rights, and does not offer or withhold them as political favors."

Developing his labor theme, Governor Dewey defended the Taft-Hartley Act by attacking Mr. Truman's demand for its repeal. Such a course, he said, would take us "back to the days of chaos—of unbridled industrial strife."

2 Hearings on Rezoning Pleas Voted by Alexandria Council

Applications for rezoning land in Alexandria will have to go through two public hearings in the future instead of one.

The City Council added this amendment to its zoning ordinance last night to make sure it is legally airtight.

Last May, the City Planning Commission took over from the council the job of conducting public hearings on zoning applications. The purpose of this change was to save the council's time. The council took final action, but conducted hearings only in extraordinary cases.

The amendment adopted in May also provided that if the Planning Commission recommended denial of an application the council could approve it only by a three-fourths vote.

Doubt later arose as to the validity of a rezoning order that was not heard by the City Council. It was on a report of a committee set up to study this problem that the council acted last night, agreeing to have both the Planning Commision and City Council hear zoning petitions.

All zoning applications acted on since the amendment of last May took effect will be reconsidered by the council, so there will be no question of their legality.

In other actions, the council:

1. Was told by an official of the State Department of Taxation that his office would be glad to make an appraisal of the city's real estate, but that it would take 10 months and cost about $20,000. The city had sought State advice after a survey made by the Bureau of Public Administration, University of Virginia, pointed out the need for a general reassessment of property.

2. Passed a motion offered by Councilman Marshall J. Beverley that the Council Finance Committee consider in next year's budget a raise in starting pay for policemen from $2160 to $2400 a year, and that police and firemen's insurance policies covering death in line of duty be raised from $5000 to $10,000. A proposal for police salary increases was made last August on former Councilman Paul L. Delaney and deferred until the 1949 budget is prepared.

Guatemala Ambassador Guest at Georgetown U.

Dr. Ismael Gonzales Arevalo, Ambassador of Guatemala, will be a guest at Georegtown University at 8 o'clock tonight, when students of the School of Foreign Service observe Guatemala Night.

The Ambassador will show movies of the industrial growth of Guatemala, and a marimba orchestra of 11 musicians will play native music.

Wagner also asserted that despite his protests the town does not provide garbage collections and has not built a graded street leading to the property, which he claims he is entitled to.

Truman Says GOP Using Polls to Convince Public Election Is Won, Insure Light Vote

believe that because peace is difficult, war is inevitable."

Because of his determination to maintain world peace by keeping America strong, the President said, the Communists were seeking his defeat by endeavoring to insure a Republican victory. The Reds, he said, support a third party in the hope that it will siphon off sufficient Democratic votes for the GOP to win.

"The Communists," he declared, "believe that a Republican victory means a weak United States. We must not let that happen."

Two minutes after 1 p. m. today a minor paragraph in history was written when Mr. Truman's special train, speeding East, passed that of his Republican opponent, Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York, going West. Just outside Swanton, Ohio, the President's special slowed while Governor Dewey's train roared by on an adjacent track. Both candidates remained inside their private cars, Mr. Truman eating his lunch.

At Cleveland the President walked up the underground ramp from his train to the Cleveland Hotel, completely by-passing a file of pickets who paraded before the street entrance with Progressive Party placards. He rode to the auditorium between the usual ranks of cheering crowds.

Mr. Truman faced one of the most responsive crowds he has had on this campaign. After a tremendous ovation, it applauded, cheered and laughed after almost every sentence of his half-hour speech.

Congress Again Assailed

In his speech, the President charged again that the special session of Congress he called for last July 26 had given the Republican Party an opportunity to carry out its 1948 platform pledges. But, he said, "they cared nothing for their platform promises or for the legislation which was so urgently needed for the public good."

One result of the session, Mr. Truman said, was a Republican statement that his quarrel with the Eightieth Congress was "a fundamental difference in Government philosophy between the President and Congress."

"To put that in plain English," he said, "It means that I believe in one kind of Government and the Republicans believe in another. And the question in this election is—which of these two kinds do you want?"

And then he lit into Governor Dewey in the bare-fisted fashion which has characterized his recent speeches.

"I know this is going to be painful to the Republican candidate," he said. "He is having such a high-level tea party with the voters that he is horrified when anybody mentions the facts of life."

"And here I am proposing to drag that old reprobate, the Republican Eightieth Congress, out of the back room and disclose him to the guests as the candidate's nearest and dearest relative. I'm going to tell the folks exactly how I gave the old sinner a chance to repent, At the special session, and to mend his ways—only three weeks after he had taken the pledge at Philadelphia—and how he refused, and backslid again into the gutter of special privilege.

"The Republican Party can change platforms and candidates, but it can't change its fundamental philosophy of government."

Recommendations Recalled

The President then enumerated eight recommendations he had made to the special session, none of which was enacted into law as he proposed. These were:

1. Effective action to hold down high prices.
2. Passage of the Taft-Ellender-Wagner housing bill.
3. Federal aid to education.
4. Raising the minimum wage from 40 cent to 75 cents an hour.
5. Increase in Social Security payments.
6. A nondiscriminatory displaced persons act.
7. Extension of public power projects.
8. Civil rights legislation.

Governor Dewey, he said, refused to use his influence for passage of any of this legislation except the displaced persons measure. And in that case, Mr. Truman said the Republican leadership in Congress:

"Told him who was really running the elephant. That's unity for you."

DP Efforts Stressed

At South Bend, Ind., where an estimated 25,000 turned out with bands and bugle corps at 9:25 a.m. he said that city was "one of the great melting pots of this country" and related his efforts to aid displaced persons in Europe. He described how he had visited displaced persons during his Potsdam visit in 1945 and determined then to do something about the problem.

Another crowd estimated at 12,000 heard a rear platform speech at Elkhart, Ind., in which Mr. Truman again assailed the Eightieth Congress for failure to pass the legislation it had favored in its Philadelphia platform. And he appealed again for a heavy vote as best insurance for a Democratic victory.

In his third rear platform speech of the day, at Sandusky, Ohio, the President reminded 4500 persons of the Democratic record for liberal legislation. He recalled his fight for the St. Lawrence seaway, a project which he said would have made a port of every Great Lakes city.

Just before reaching Cleveland, he addressed 3500 at Elyria, Ohio, assailing the Republican stand on farm cooperatives and pointing to their success in agricultural Lorain County.

The presidential train left Cleveland at 10 p.m. for New England, where Mr. Truman will climax a day of platform talks with a major speech at Boston Wednesday.

Hume School Site Opposed In Arlington

The Arlington School Board's proposal to locate the new Hume School on the Heiner tract, on S. 23d st. a block west of Arlington Ridge rd., was opposed by nearby home owners last night at a meeting in James Monroe School.

Mrs. A. H. Tawresey, who lives directly opposite the proposed school site at 2301 S. Pierce st., said a school there would seriously damage the area as a select residential neighborhood. Other owners among the 50 person at the meeting supported her and added that site would be too costly and some other location would be more central for elementary school children. They suggested a site adjacent to the Shirley Homes housing development as more suitable.

School Board Chairman Barnard Joy, who is negotiating for the Heiner tract location, said the board is considering building a school of eight or nine rooms from proceeds of the $1,776,000 bond issue approved by the voters, allowing for expansion to 18 or 20 rooms as the area develops.

Mrs. Edmund Campbell, board member, charged that property owners always object when a school site near them is chosen, adding, "They all want good schools, but they don't want them near their homes."

Dr. Conant is honored for distinguished service in the field of science, Dean McIntosh for "leadership of youth and development of American character," and Senator Vandenberg for distinguished service in public affairs.

Atlanta Journal Announces for Truman

Atlanta, Oct. 26 (AP).—The Atlanta Journal today announced editorially it would support President Truman as the Democratic Party's nominee.

The newspaper said it felt "the place for Democrats is in the Democratic Party, not in a grudging apostasy to strange gods and false principles."

The newspaper's editorial descrcibed the States Rights Democrats as "bolters," and added, "they couldn't have their way in convention so they quit in rebellion . . ."

Man Snatches Baby as Wife Is Hit and Killed by Train

Baltimore, Oct. 26 (AP).—A distraught father told police today his wife jumped in front of a passenger train with their 11-month-old son and he snatched the baby just in time.

Dr. John Claffy, Anne Arundel medical examiner, is investigating the strange death of Mrs. John Little, 31, of suburban Dorsey. Her body was found on the pilot of a Baltimore & Ohio locomotive when it pulled into a station here last night.

Herbert Henchel, a neighbor of the Littles, told police the father ran into the Henchel house screaming:

"My God, call police! Erma just jumped in front of a train."

Officers said they handcuffed Little for a while because he was so frantic.

Today he told the Baltimore News-Post that his wife "just stood there—stood between the rails with the baby in her arms."

Little explained it was his habit to go to his parents' home each evening while his wife was doing the dinner dishes. He said he was returning when he saw her walking along the road which leads 200 yards from their home to the B. & O. main line tracks.

"I called her, but she didn't answer," he said. "I called again, but she paid no attention.

"Just then I heard the train whistle. I started running across the field toward her. I sort of had a feeling she was going to jump on the tracks.

"She reached the tracks before I did and just stood there.

"I screamed: 'Erma, don't—for God's sake, don't.

"I tried to grab the baby with one hand and drag her off the tracks with the other. I managed to snatch the baby from her arms. I had a grip on her dress, but she pulled it from my hand.

"I jumped from the tracks with the baby in my arms. The train struck her. It almost hit me.

"I stumbled from the tracks and cried for help.

"I don't know why she did it. Only God knows that."

Neighbors telephoned police and found Mrs. Little's slippers on the track. The locomotive crewman did not know of the tragedy until a woman passenger observed the body after the 15-mile trip into Baltimore.

The Littles had been married eight years. He served overseas in the Army and is a distillery foreman.

Pratt Backs School Bonds For Arlington

The $4,750,000 bond issue sought by Arlington's school board got support from an unexpected source yesterday.

Pratt

Charles Orlando Pratt, attorney and former president of the Greater Arlington Association, called the bond issue "absolutely essential." The bond issue will be voted on in Tuesday's election.

With Pratt as president, the GAA, in the spring of 1947, vehemently opposed a proposed six-million-dollar school bond issue. Only $1,776,000 worth of the issue was approved at the polls that May.

The association, however, has taken no position on the present bond issue.

Pratt was outspoken at the outset of the bond question in declaring that approval of the bond would "saddle Arlington taxpayers with an enormous debt." He said it was "foolish" to build schools when costs were soaring.

Since that time, Pratt said he had "thought over the school problem, wrestled with it," and come to the conclusion that there was "no choice now—we must have more schools and have them in a hurry."

He said he had felt in 1947 that the size of Government in Washington would "diminish" and people move out of Arlington.

However, study of the United States Census figures recently compiled on Arlington's present and future population convinced Pratt that more school facilities were needed, that Arlington would continue to grow.

Pratt said he believes Arlington's taxable property "will more than double in the next 25 years," the duration of the proposed bond issue, thus lessening the tax burden on the individual citizen.

Pratt, a Republican, was unsuccessful last fall as a candidate for Arlington Trial Justice. Again this summer, he was nosed out in the Eighth District GOP primary as candidate for Congress.

Danish Steamer Sinks

Copenhagen, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—The 300-ton Danish steamer Carl sank last night during a gale in the Gulf of Finland, the Dalifa Shipping Co. announced today. The entire crew of 13 Danes was missing.

More Hours, Days Urged for Schools

More hours a day and more days a week of schooling for youth was urged here last night by Dr. George H. Reavis, assistant superintendent of schools in Cincinnati.

The field of human knowledge has expanded so greatly, he said, schools can only begin to pass on the new knowledge by expanding school days and hours.

He also suggested parents provide increased opportunities for their children's reading, in an address at Leland Junior High School, Bethesda.

U. S.-British Link in Ideas Called Peace Hope

In the "like-mindedness" of the United States and Great Britain lies one of the major hopes of world peace, Sir Oliver Franks, the British Ambassador, said here last night.

Sir Oliver spoke at a reception for him and Lady Franks given by the Washington Rhodes Scholar Group at the Whittall Pavilion of the Library of Congress.

More than 100 Rhodes scholars and their wives, including Frank Aydelotte, American secretary to the Rhodes trustees, were present.

The Ambassador stressed the importance of American-British relationships during the coming 10 years.

He said American aid under the Marshall Plan had enabled Britain "at least to get on the highway" leading toward recovery.

Sir Oliver was formerly provost of Queen's College at Oxford.

Speakers, welcoming the Ambassador with brief reports on life in the United States, included Felix Morley, editor and former New Deal figure; Clifford Durr, Federal Communications Commission member; Alain Locke, Howard University professor; Bruce Waybur, labor economist; Philip Kaiser, Labor Department economist; Clarence Streit, author; Critchell Parsons, former WPA petroleum expert; Ernest K. Lindley, Newsweek commentator; Gen. James MacCormick of the Atomic Energy Commission; Dr. Shepherd Jones, State Department official; Comdr. Harold Payson, USN; and Dr. Bernadotte Schmitt, State Department historian, who presided.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.
When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, used successfully by millions for over 50 years. Doan's give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

"Thanks for the 'City of Los Angeles'"
This unsolicited letter tells the story of the many advantages available to travelers on the daily Streamliner "City of Los Angeles."
UNION PACIFIC
Mr. G. F. Ashby, President
Union Pacific Railroad
Omaha, Nebr.
Dear Mr. Ashby:
Business necessitates my going east at least every six weeks. I have used every medium of transportation, but have finally settled on Union Pacific's "City of Los Angeles." I travel on "The City" because its time of departure enables me to do a full day's work in Los Angeles and enjoy a good dinner aboard the train long before bedtime.
The following day, in the privacy of my bedroom, I can utilize the time preparing for my activities in Chicago, and "The City" arrives early enough the next morning so that a full day's business activity is not lost.
The genial atmosphere in the lounge car, the superb meals served by the friendly staff in the diner, the accommodations, all make each trip an event. Thanks for the "City of Los Angeles."
Yours truly,

Woman, 80, Struck By Motorcycle Car

An 80-year-old woman was seriously injured yesterday afternoon when she was struck by the sidecar of a motorcycle at 11th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

She was Mrs. Lucie Pamchell of 18 Cedar st., Alexandria, who was admitted to Emergency Hospital suffering shock and hip and back injuries.

Police said she was walking south across Pennsylvania ave. when she was struck by the sidecar of the motorcycle, operated west on Pennsylvania ave. by Philip P. Wilson, 21, of 1608 22d st. se. Wilson was charged with failing to yield the right of way.

Meanwhile, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday issued certificates of accidental death in two recent traffic deaths here. The fatalities were:

Mrs. Anna Lightman, 73, of 3201 Warder st. nw., who died Sunday night at Emergency Hospital of injuries received October 18, when she stepped into the side of a streetcar on Georgia ave. near Shepherd st. It was operated by Gilbert Rhine, 58, of near Hyattsville.

Miss Alice L. Anderson, 38, of 1499 Irving st. nw., who died last Saturday at Emergency Hospital of injuries received two days earlier when she stepped into the path of a streetcar, operated by Homer H. Glaves, 53, of 1820 Lamont st. nw., on 14th st. at Irving st. nw.

Off Hoopersville

5 Fishermen Missing in Bay Collision

Hoopersville, Md., Oct. 26 (AP).—A tanker and a fishing trawler collided in the dark off this Chesapeake Bay island early today and five fishermen from Reedville, Va., are missing.

Sixteen men were rescued after the 108-ton Colonna went down. Her skipper, Capt. R. B. Shelton, was taken aboard the tanker with a broken leg.

Captain Shelton said he believed there were 21 crewmen aboard, perhaps a twenty-second man. He listed the missing as Bennie Downs, Harding Jones, Nathan Rich, Harry Smith and a man whose name he didn't know.

The Colonna collided with the Tullahoma, a 10,296-ton tanker on its way from Baytown, Tex., to Baltimore with 116,425 barrels of process oil.

The Tullahoma lowered her boats, fished the 16 crewmen out of the water and stood by looking for other survivors.

They were listed as John Shelton, Pratt Hynie, Loren Percifel, Roser Carey, Howie Newton, Armstead Johnson, Freddie Blue, Zeke Taylor, Horace Washington, Purcell Dixon, Shemen Selph, Percell Day, and Elijah Towells.

Navy Ship Nears Port After Atlantic Storm

Norfolk, Va., Oct. 26 (AP).—Still holding together after taking a terrific beating in the Atlantic, a Navy amphibious ship sailed through moderating seas tonight toward the Philadelphia naval shipyard.

The 63-man crew, wearied by a 56-hour survival battle with high winds and 30-foot waves, managed even to sound a little cocky this afternoon in a radio dispatch that said a tug would be enough escort for the remaining distance to port.

Bishop Oxnam To Speak Here In Fund Drive

Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of the Methodist Church will speak at an interdenominations foreign missions mass meeting at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw., at 8 p. m. November 4.

The meeting is part of a program being conducted by the Foreign Missions Conference of North America to raise 150 million dollars for 66 missionary agencies. Similar meetings are being held in other cities throughout the Nation. Mrs. Paul Moser, member of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, will also speak at the Washington gathering.

Denominational meetings preceding the mass meeting are being planned by a number of groups in the city. Bishop Charles Wesley Flint of Washington, resident bishop of the Methodist Church, will preside over sessions of a missionary advance program at Hamline Methodist Church, 16th and Allison sts. nw., on Thursday and Friday, November 4 and 5. Ministers and laymen from Maryland and Washington will attend the meetings.

Virus Flypaper To Trap Germs Is Suggested

A "bacteria and virus flypaper" to snare cold and other air-borne germs which accumulate in public auditoriums has been suggested by Leonard S. Green.

Green, an air sanitation consultant, spoke yesterday before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers at their sixty-fourth annual convention here at the Hotel Statler.

Basic problem is that in any confined space, there are "air borne contaminants" which may spread disease.

Green pointed out that these bacteria are no problem out of doors, where they are either destroyed by the ultra violet rays of the sun, or diluted by wind.

Green indicated that air-conditioned theaters are more germ-free than those where blowers are used to clear the air. But he advocated use of ultra violet ray and glycol vapor in ventilating practice, together with dust suppressive measures—and this is where the fly paper comes in.

Green said that an absorptive oil of a quantity "so minute as to be imperceptible" had been tried on horizontal surfaces such as floors and had reduced the "normal microbic air borne population" from 60 to 80 per cent.

Green called for air sanitizing procedures as "the missing link in present ventilating practice" and suggested a prophylactic auditorium "to which the public can be invited and be told that the surroundings are more comfortable and at least as healthy, if not healthier, than may be found in their own home. It will ultimately reap its own rewards."

2 Retire Saturday

Women End 22 Years in Same Office

Miss Robie Miss Easter

Two women, who have worked together in the same Government office for 22 years, will end 30 years of Government service each with their retirement Saturday.

They are Miss Lenna Easter, correspondence clerk, and Miss Ruth McRobie, purchase order writer, in the Office of Procurement Division, Veterans Administration.

Both came to Washington as war workers during the first World War—Miss Easter from Winterset, Iowa, and Miss McRobie from Oakland, Md.

A former public school teacher, Miss Easter joined the War Risk Insurance office, predecessor of the Veterans Bureau, which is now VA. Miss McRobie worked for two years with the War Department and one year with the U. S. Public Health Service before joining the agency that later became the VA.

Neither has definite plans for their new leisure time, but both agree they'll take a long rest. Miss McRobie, who lives at the All-States Hotel, plans to return to Oakland, Md., eventually. Miss Easter lives at 1435 N st. nw.

Freer Leaving FTC Post for Law Practice

Robert E. Freer, chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, said yesterday he will resign in December and return to private practice of law.

Freer

Freer has been with the Government more than 20 years. He said he will leave because "I must devote my future earning capacity to the creation of financial security for my family."

Freer was appointed to the bipartisan Federal Trade Commission as a Republican member by President Roosevelt on August 24, 1935. He was reappointed by President Roosevelt in 1938 and by President Truman in 1945, his present term expiring in September 1952.

A native of Cincinnati, Ohio, he attended Ohio State and George Washington Universities, graduating with the bachelor of arts degree.

He served in France with a machine-gun battalion during World War I.

In 1925 he became an attorney for the Interstate Commerce Commission. In 1933, he was named research assistant and attorney by Federal Coordinator of Transportation Joseph B. Eastman. He served also as special counsel for the United States Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce from January to August 1935.

He was professor of law at Xavier University, Cincinnati, and at Washington College of Law, as well as lecturer in railway economics and public law at American University Graduate School, Washington. He is a trustee of George Washington University and formerly was national president of the Federal Bar Association.

His Washington address is 3218 Cleveland ave. Mr. and Mrs. Freer have two sons and two daughters.

Fort Myer Holds Two for Beating, Robbing Marine

Fort Myer authorities last night were holding two soldiers who allegedly admitted beating and robbing an 18-year-old Marine, Pvt. Charles Reffitt, of $125 on October 18.

Reffitt said he was beaten and robbed in his room at the Hotel Harrington by two soldiers whom he had met in a downtown night club.

The suspects, 16 and 17, attached to the Military District of Washington, were located through pictures they had taken at the night club.

Plan to Abandon Manchuria Denied

Nanking, Oct. 26 (AP).—A military spokesman today denied knowledge of any Chinese government plan to abandon Manchuria.

(The reports persist in Peiping, however, that President Chiang Kai-shek is about to tell his armies at Mukden to leave for North China, there to make a fresh stand against the Communists.)

The United States Embassy, which maintains a consulate at Mukden, likewise said it had heard of no move to quit Manchuria. The embassy presumably would be given advance warning.

Greenbelt Church Site Parley Set for Today

The Public Housing Administration hopes to reach a decision today in a conference with religious groups on allowing them to buy church sites in Greenbelt, Md.

PHA Commissioner John Taylor Egan said he is "completely sympathetic" with the desire of the church organizations to obtain sites, and will present at the conference three possible courses of action as the basis for discussion.

O'Dea Rejects Fight on CTC Fare Decision

People's Counsel John O'Dea disclosed last night that he has decided not to ask for reconsideration of the recent decision granting a fare increase to the Capital Transit Co.

O'Dea said after a lengthy study of the record in the case and the District Public Utilities Commission decision that he saw "no legal basis for asking for reconsideration."

The Washington Committee for Consumer Protection has already instructed its legal representative, Harry R. Booth, to prepare a request for reconsideration. The fare increase is scheduled to go into effect Sunday at 5 a. m. unless the committee's actions before the PUC or in the courts tie up the rate boost.

The new rate schedule raised the present 10-cent cash fare to 13 cents, reinstituted tokens at 3 for 35 cents and boosted the weekly pass from $1.50 to $1.75.

The PUC "was fair in its conduct of the hearing, so far as I am concerned," O'Dea declared. The consumer group in telegrams and petitions to the White House and the PUC has contended the PUC did not handle the hearings fairly.

Takoma Park Council Rejects Change in Terms

Takoma Park City Council has voted thumbs down on a proposal for overlapping council terms.

The proposal, advanced by Councilman W. C. McClenon, suggested either annual council elections with two-year terms or biennial elections with four-year terms.

Mayor John C. Post, announcing the council's rejection of McClenon's plans, said most council members felt annual elections would "keep the town in constant uproar" and that the four-year terms under the biennial election plan "would be too long."

The city's present seven-member council is elected in its entirety every two years.

Senatorial Dilemma

With the election only six days away, concern over the organization of the Senate is mounting as if it were the major issue to be decided. Most observers take it for granted that the President to be elected next week will carry with him a majority for his own party in the House. But factors that overreach party lines enter into various senatorial contests. Indeed, many people who intend to vote for Governor Dewey for President seem to favor such Democrats as Kefauver in Tennessee, Douglas in Illinois, and Anderson in New Mexico for the Senate. Republican candidates for the Senate in more than half a dozen States are regarded as being so much weaker than Mr. Dewey that the dilemma of divided Government in Washington is giving the Governor's followers genuine worries.

Mr. Walter Lippmann has gone so far as to suggest that a few Democratic Senators pledge themselves before the election to let the Republicans organize the Senate if Mr. Dewey wins and carries a Republican majority in the House and lacks only a narrow margin for control of the Senate. That, it is said, would make voters feel easier about casting their ballots for Democratic candidates for the Senate. But no Democratic Senators have responded to the suggestion. We can imagine few things more certain than that the Democrats will organize the Senate and take over the committee chairmanships, with all the perquisites that go with them, if they win a majority of the seats in that body. And even if by some miracle they should restrain themselves from claiming what would be their due, the result would be only to create a false impression of Republican control where it would not exist in fact. Minority leadership in a legislative body cannot be made successful by giving a few minority leaders key positions.

If the danger of continuing a cleavage between Capitol Hill and the White House is sufficiently emphasized in the closing days of the campaign, it may be that vote splitting will be minimized. At least some voters may be convinced of the desirability of giving full control over the two political branches of the Government to one party or the other. It is by no means improbable, however, that some voters may conclude that certain Democratic senatorial candidates would cooperate with Mr. Dewey, if he should be elected, more readily than the candidates of his own party, especially in the field of foreign affairs. In any event, these decisions must be left to the people. The most constructive step that can be taken at this time, as we see it, is to impress upon the electorate the desirability of looking at the whole problem of electing an effective national Administration that will be competent to deal with the critical problems of our times.

Frustrated Men

Much ado has recently been made in books and magazines, on platform and radio, over the frustrations and neuroses of modern woman. Now at last this feminine hogging of the psychological spotlight has been invaded by maladjusted modern man whose emotional woes are presented in the current number of the American Mercury. Edith M. Stern, writing on "The Miserable Male," shows how all the adjectives currently applied to today's woman—"confused," "disoriented," "thwarted," "uprooted," "drifting," "neurotic"—also fit today's urban man who must live in a kitchenette instead of a cave. Mrs. Stern, a writer and lecturer in the field of psychiatry and social welfare, finds that civilized man is fulfilling his "biological destiny" even less than civilized woman. Small wonder, she says, that more men than women commit suicide, that men outnumber women in mental hospitals, and that the nervous symptom of stuttering is five times more prevalent among men and boys than among women and girls.

For example, says this author, man today must restrain his innate male pugnacity—no longer use a club on those who thwart him, at home, at the office, in the neighborhood. He also is frustrated in his "normal primitive role of the hunter." Instead of proudly dragging home a wild animal for his family to feed upon, he must turn over his pay check to his wife or, worse still, stop at the chain store for a pound of bologna. Monogamy has robbed him of his once promiscuous habits and shoved onto him prolonged paternal responsibility, which is "biologically unnatural" for the male. He must shave daily, wear drab regimented suits instead of a leopard skin or cascade of feathers. Instead of setting off for a bear hunt, he must punch time clocks, hunch over a desk, turn a screw on an assembly line. In his home he is shouted down by his children and nagged by his wife, who may even deflate his ego by going out to work and making more money than he does. At every turn he is thwarted by civilization.

All of this shows it is indeed high time modern man got his inning among the neurotic. Since, modern women have been completely condemned to this state, and since it has been found that dogs, cats and horses also suffer from neurotic frustrations, the adding of man to the category just about makes it unanimous.

Fix Over Palestine

No matter what Mr. Truman says, there has been no "nonpartisan basis" for the foreign policy toward Palestine; this has been one of the few subjects on which there has been no effort to come to an interparty agreement. On the contrary, both parties in the past have sought to make political capital out of it. There might have been such an agreement if Secretary Marshall, before he rushed into a blanket indorsement of the Bernadotte Plan, had consulted the Republicans. This he did not do, and it is questionable, indeed, whether he consulted President Truman, if the latest Truman statement is any guide. The President, seeking the best of both possible worlds, backs the Democratic platform, which approved the "boundaries set forth in the United Nations resolution of November 29," and at the same time praises the boundary solution of the Bernadotte Plan as "a basis of negotiation." It is impossible to reconcile this statement either with itself or with Secretary Marshall's that Jew and Arab should "accept them [the Bernadotte recommendations] in their entirety."

It is now plain that Secretary Marshall rushed in without taking the General Assembly into account. The General Assembly is a party at interest in the Jew-Arab dispute. Its resolution of November 29 last year has not been revoked, nor is it affected by the Bernadotte Plan, which, while recognizing the fact that Israel exists and recommending that Jerusalem be internationalized, departs in certain vital particulars from the Assembly recommendation on boundaries. The mediator had no authority from the General Assembly to do this. To be sure, the boundaries set forth in the Assembly resolution should not be regarded as immutable. The Jew-Arab conflict, for instance, has made changes necessary, if only because an economic union between Jew and Arab, upon which the Assembly plan rested, must await the precipitation of the present unneighborliness. In this circumstance no settlement can be regarded as either just or permanent unless Israel is made a viable state and provided with access to Jerusalem. It was for these reasons that this newspaper, thinking in terms of a situation altogether different from the situation prevailing last November, thought of the Bernadotte Plan at least as a "starting point." The fact has since been demonstrated in Paris that the General Assembly regards its own resolution as "the starting point."

The exigencies of American politics—the fact that there has never been an interparty agreement on Palestine—persuaded the Assembly at American instigation to move Palestine to the bottom of the agenda. When the item is reached, let us not forget the stake in the matter held by the General Assembly. Members of the Assembly regard the Bernadotte Plan as an effort to reconcile Britain and America. This was done by depriving Israel of the whole of the Negev, so as to give Britain air bases there, either through a local Arab government or through Trans-Jordan. Evidently the British want to assure for themselves a land bridge between the Mediterranean and the Persian Gulf. In addition to forgetting both the claims of Israel and the terms of the Assembly resolution, Britain and America seem to have disregarded the susceptibilities of Egypt, which is just as much against this disposition of the Negev as Israel. It is clear that in the interest of Middle East peace, let alone justice to Israel, this solution of the Negev issue is unacceptable. However, it would be unwise of the Assembly in present circumstances to try to fix boundaries. The final disposition ought to be made by Jew and Arab, since they have to live together, and a committee of the Assembly should assist the negotiators and pass upon the result. Then, when an agreement has been achieved, both Israel and Trans-Jordan should be brought into the United Nations.

But, in order that this procedure shall prevail, the Administration will have to do some backtracking on the Marshall statement. That, of course, will not be necessary if the Republicans win. They are not in the same box on Palestine as the Administration, for the Republicans have held steadfastly to their platform, which would accord Israel "full recognition with its boundaries as sanctioned by the United Nations and aid in developing its economy." It was Mr. Dewey's reaffirmation of the Republican platform that produced the latest confusion in the Administration's stand.

Soviet Conservation

Discounting Moscow's usual invidious comparison with capitalist "exploitation," the new 15-year reclamation program announced by the Soviet Union is one of great potential significance. It envisages nothing less than a wholesale change of climate. Great forest belts aggregating some 3000 miles in length are to be planted to counteract the drought effects of the dry winds blowing from the central Asian desert across the Caspian Sea into agricultural Russia. These belts are to be supplemented with more trees on collective farms. In addition the plan contemplates an extensive system of reservoirs for irrigation and hydroelectric power, as well as intensified crop rotation. Altogether nearly 300 million acres of land are involved.

This, of course, is just the plan. If the iron curtain remains drawn, there will be no way an outsider can check on performance, just as there is no objective way of evaluating Soviet industrial statistics. Nevertheless, the very advent of such a plan does indicate an awareness of the need for conserving natural resources. The Russians do not lack ambition in this respect. Fairfield Osborn, in his book, Our Plundered Planet, tells of a project to supply more water to the Volga River for irrigation and to maintain the level of the Caspian Sea by reversing the course of rivers now flowing into the Arctic. In scope and complexity, Mr. Osborn says, this "considerably exceeds" the Tennessee Valley project.

Mr. Osborn makes another relevant observation: The ratio of cultivable acres to population is approximately the same in the Soviet Union as in the United States. Thus if the present reclamation effort should succeed, conceivably it could lead to a more ample diet which in turn would influence Soviet policy away from expansionism. Conversely, if the cold war should develop into a long-range conflict, what is done in the way of conservation might determine the winner.

American authorities have been quick to point out that our own conservation efforts far exceed those so far undertaken by Russia. But this is no reason for smugness. Mere reference to the fact that we are still losing 5,400,000,000 tons of topsoil to erosion annually should convince us that regardless of what we have done to conserve our land, it is not yet enough.

Atlantic Alliance

What started out last spring as a western European military union among Britain, France, and the three Low Countries is now on the verge of becoming a North Atlantic alliance. The Canadian and United States officers who have sat in on military discussions in London for some months past were not there solely for purposes of observation. In Ottawa and in Washington it is now openly predicted that formal consultations looking toward at least a seven-nation pact will soon begin. It is well known that proposals for a sort of military "lend-lease" arrangement are to be presented to Congress in January.

The seed of this development has been present from the start. Indeed, the western European nations, fearful of a Russian sweep westward and hesitant to offend the Kremlin, would never have taken the original action without stimulation and encouragement from Washington. Implicit in all their planning has been a commitment of American support to the extent necessary to make the paper alliance a reality in the event of conflict. For, as we have previously pointed out, only through supplies of arms and other material from this country can the Western Union be a viable force in military terms.

The cost of arming western Europe against Russian aggression will be measured in billions of dollars added to the total of economic aid already being given under the ERP. One estimate has put it at from 4 to 8 billions of dollars over the next three or four years. It will, at any rate, be enough to put a severe strain on the American pocketbook. It may well have repercussions on the daily lives of all of us. An increase of appropriations of this magnitude will probably mean higher taxes. The demand for raw materials and military manufactures, superimposed on our already taut production, may bring higher prices—unless Congress can be persuaded to reestablish controls.

But for peace by way of preparedness there is always a price, and it cannot always be paid in dollars. We hope that when the election is out of the way these facts will be thoroughly and honestly discussed by the responsible Government officials. The people have a right to know what steps are being taken and why. We think that a great majority will support a common defense policy for the Western democracies within the spirit and framework of the United Nations as the best approach that can be made at this time toward security. But they are more likely to do so if this policy is hammered out on the anvil of public debate.

Fourth Round

There is a plaintive note in the newly announced decision of the American Federation of Labor to seek fourth-round wage increases in 1949. "Businessmen," the AFL recognizes, "want to raise their profits just as workers want to raise their wages. But to continue the wage-price spiral, with wage increases followed by drastic price increases, is an economic absurdity which benefits no one." Consequently, the AFL asks employer cooperation in cutting costs so that wage increases can be paid without continuing the price spiral.

Implicit in this argument, it seems to us, is a large element of "let George do it." AFL leaders, in company with the spokesmen of organized labor generally, have begun to understand that wage demands which result in price increases are nothing more than a treadmill for union members. The effects of such a policy are even worse for white-collar workers, who often must meet higher prices without boosts in salary. But no one seems to want to be the first to follow the thesis to its logical conclusion. There are probably some instances in which wage increases could be absorbed by industry and still leave a fair margin of profit, but the AFL ought to be convinced by experience that there is no way to force this in a free economy. Instead, the AFL again seems to be looking for that elusive pot of gold at the end of the rainbow.

Youth Grabs The Nettle

"Tougher" Generation

ANYONE SEEKING a social and political clew to tomorrow would do well to listen in on some of the postvacation talk on college campuses, in dormitories and student meetings. A surprisingly large number of students are telling of summer adventures that extended far beyond tennis courts, bathing beaches, or offices, far beyond the traditional summer pursuit of good times or pin money.

They are telling of their experiences in work camps, both in backward areas of this country and devastated ones of Europe, in which they helped build schoolhouses, churches, roads, helped reconstruct communities and human beings. They are telling of what they learned about other nationalities and races in the international living projects conducted by the Quakers, or in the summer camps sponsored by the religious but nonsectarian Lisle Fellowships and similar groups.

Possibly as many as 10,000 of them, half of whom traveled on the United States marine transports, are telling of their studies at summer schools in Norway, France, Italy, Austria, England, or of their work in reconstruction projects in Holland, France, other devastated countries. Perhaps most interesting of all are those who already are planning repeats of the projects they originated, financed and operated last summer to acquaint foreign students with American life and culture.

A GROUP that can point with especial pride is that from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Its members raised $30,000 to finance a summer school on the M. I. T. campus to which were brought 80 students from all parts of Europe, including regions behind the iron curtain.

Other students having unique undertakings to tell about are those from Harvard University and elsewhere who helped sponsor a summer school in a castle at Salzburg, Austria. To this, young leaders from all over Europe were brought for courses in American culture—and incidentally for the first square meals some of them had had in years.

These are only a few of the projects through which American college students or young workers last summer broadened their minds and enlarged their sympathies. The zeal with which they have been taking hold of international and social problems has caused one State Department official who observed their foreign activities at close range to predict that a "tougher" generation is on the way.

These young people at least appear in strong contrast to the disillusioned young intellectuals of the 1920s who turned to cultural and moral rebellion at home or fled to Paris garrets and a dilettante pursuit of the arts to escape American "crudity" and the depressing state of the world. They also seem to be meeting world problems more realistically than the youth of the 1930s, many of whom sought refuge in self-pity and pacifism.

WHETHER or not they prove tougher mentally than their antecedents, they should be better informed and better fitted to furnish their country a nucleus of political and cultural leadership in the future. What the impact of this leadership is going to be on the Nation a decade hence, or even sooner, is a question that might well concern political parties.

Will it finally break down the inherent isolationism that so frequently cramps the Nation's efforts at world leadership? Will it accelerate a swing of the pendulum away from today's nostalgia for the status quo? Will it bring about less provincialism in Congress and less political and cultural regionalism among Americans generally?

Its results, whatever they may be, are likely to bring surprises to all complacent public leaders of today who think in terms of an electorate of the days when youth spent its summers on the neighborhood tennis courts or at the corner drug store in the company of its own "set."

President's Health

In your editorial of October 19, "Presidential Transition," you very properly point out that the successful candidate in the coming election will need rest before plunging into the most arduous assignment in the world.

Whichever candidate becomes President-elect, from that moment around his life and being will gravitate the well-laid plans of foe and friend, and simultaneously the destiny of the Nation will be determined in part by his state of health, not today, not tomorrow, but during the whole of the four-year term 1949-1952.

The candidate who is elected for the new term commencing in January, 1949, will assume even greater responsibilities than did Woodrow Wilson or Franklin D. Roosevelt. President Wilson collapsed of cerebral hemorrhage while in office, on September 25, 1919; and Roosevelt, of cerebral hemorrhage, also while in office, on April 12, 1945.

More recently, on February 12, 1948, the press reported that William O'Dwyer of New York City, mayor of the largest city in the world, and 58 years of age, had developed a coronary heart condition and that his activities had been ordered restricted. He departed for California on March 12, returned to New York on April 11, and jumped back into harness. The doctors on July 1, on the basis of a physical examination, reported his health completely restored—whatever this phrase means when it relates to one of the kingpin decision-makers on our American political scene.

Winston Churchill, on the other hand, with his painting and through rest and meditation and the other devices he has so cunningly devised as means of relaxation, has learned the art of running the human machine. To all appearances he enjoys life to the full at the mature age of 74; and yet no decision-maker of the modern world has carried graver or vaster responsibilities than Britain's wartime Prime Minister.

The health of the President of the United States is a matter of public concern to the Nation, for upon his health depends the continuity of the Nation's political and military policies at home and abroad.

Therefore, so far as the public interest may permit, should not the American citizenry who have raised the President to his high office and recognize his authority to make momentous decisions, be kept informed by competent specialists concerning the President's state of health?

Arlington Issues

In Arlington in 1946 there was launched a movement to restore control of their local government to the people.

Milestones in that fight include formation of the Citizens Committee for School Improvement, the election of Dan Dugan as a nonpartisan member of the county board, passage of referendum legislation giving Arlington the first elected school board in Virginia, defeat of all "machine" candidates in the 1947 school board election, and election of a second nonpartisan county board member by the Better Government League.

There are five members of the county board—two nonpartisan and three "machine" members. Control of the board is now at stake, since it is the term of "machine" member Alfred Frisbie that expires this year. The school improvement and better government forces are supporting nonpartisan I. Lee Potter against Frisbie, who wears the Democratic label. There are two other "machine" encouraged splinter candidates.

In this campaign the major issues are the veto powers of the county board over the school budget and partisan versus nonpartisan local elections. A vote for Potter will be a vote for an adequate school budget. Defeat of Frisbie will help take party labels out of our local elections.

The referendum proposal to change the date for electing the school board is a "machine" trick to nullify the legislation making the board responsible to the people, and should be voted down. Passage of the bond issue is absolutely necessary to give Arlington decent school facilities and is well within the financial capacity of the taxpayers.

Musical "Pogrom"

I was more amused than chagrined to see an error in setting up my letter of October 22. Apparently, where I had written to the effect that Mr. Hume's performance was "a well-chosen pogrom of vocal music," one of your linotype operators set it up as "a well-chosen program." Naturally, this completely vitiated the sense.

What I meant to imply was that Mr. Hume (the ablest critic in town) was more valorous than discreet in appearing as a concert artist. I do not question his musicianship, which appears to be of the finest, but I feel he lacks the vocal equipment for singing.

"Research Chief"

I would have expected you in your editorial of October 8, to honor Dr. Vannevar Bush for genuine public service, to pay tribute for the inspired genius with which he organized our scientific manpower before Pearl Harbor and on a basis which subsequently so effectively served us and our allies, and to recognize the bold imagination with which Dr. Bush perfected a technique enabling the Government to support scientific research on the terms and in the laboratories most conducive to maximum success.

Instead, however, you chose to throw doubt on the effectiveness of the teamwork among scientists which Dr. Bush both symbolized and inspired, you chose to cast a reflection on as warm and human a personality as ever successfully and vigorously discharged heavy responsibilities in times of stress.

One word as to the National Science Foundation. Few would deny that the Federal Government must support and foster science and scientific research on a dynamic and vigorous basis as an essential measure for our common defense and general welfare. Many may well differ, however, as to the methods which Government should employ in providing the support for scientific research which, we are agreed, is essential. But, on that issue, I would not be content simply to take the judgment of those whom you call "students of sound public policy" or even the judgment of experts in public administration.

I would prefer, on such an issue, the conviction of the scientists who have both experience and proven ability in organizing and directing science to successful results. Proven techniques of business or political administration are not necessarily suited to the administration of scientific research. And when it comes to the administration of scientific research there is no man with a richer experience or a more successful record than Dr. Bush.

As for your suggestion that Dr. Bush's proposal for a National Science Foundation necessarily resulted in domination by a few large universities, I submit that the purpose and the result of his proposal would have been precisely the reverse. The over-all objective of Dr. Bush's proposal was to expand and develop the scientific resources of the entire Nation and to do so without compromising at any time the successful prosecution of essential programs of scientific inquiry.

Pending the optimum development of our national scientific resources which Dr. Bush envisioned, the Nation must use its ablest scientists wherever they may be found. If, as you seem to feel, such scientists happen to be found in our larger universities, should we, for that reason, now deprive ourselves of the unique contribution they are currently able to make or entrust our scientific future to persons less able than they?

Bernadotte Plan

I hold it but fair to the reading public that someone call attention to the letter in your issue of October 22 under the caption "Shrinking Jewish State," which followed close upon the paid advertisement of a Zionist organization which gave the so-called "shrinkage" in figures from 45,000 to 2180 square miles of Palestine.

As one who has visited Palestine many times since the Balfour Declaration, and has seen in each succeeding visit acre after acre of the only arable land in Palestine bought up by the Zionists, including practically all of fertile Galilee, I have wondered how the majority population of the country (Arabs) would live. The rocky, barren, even grassless, peaks of the land have been untouched and unwanted by the Zionists. The entire Negev, or great southern section of the country that stretches from Jerusalem to the Egyptian border, includes the hill country of Judea, where Amos and John the Baptist existed on locusts and wild honey, with a few figs added. The New Testament calls this great expanse "a desert." This had been accorded to the Arab population, along with the barren hills of the otherwise fertile sections of the country.

But the Zionists, in their intense desire to own and extract minerals from the Dead Sea, have laid claim to this arid section.

Those who have known the situation, first, the British authorities, have noted the unfairness of such an adjustment, and the Swedish mediator, Bernadotte, soon discovered the same thing and said so. His successor indicates what Bernadotte had left as his dying suggestion. Against all this, the Zionists place the vote of the United Nations, where everybody who reads knows the vote was carried by men who did not know the truth concerning this claim of Zionists to Palestine.

Disillusioned Voters

As a student majoring in political science, and as an individual keenly interested in the political affairs of the time, I am forced to express my disillusionment, and that of countless other college men of voting age, in the current presidential campaign.

Ever since I was a young boy, I have been looking forward to the day when I could fulfill my obligation as an American citizen, and take part in the selection of our governing officials. This year, the election campaign has produced neither clear-cut issues nor leading personalities and has seemed to degenerate into a "lesser-of-the-four-evils" affair. The apathy on the part of the voting people is not only quite evident, but is easily understandable.

Mr. Dewey talks in terms of vague generalizations, President Truman's homespun techniques simply do not work, Mr. Thurmond covers up the true principles of his party with the Victorian-age doctrine of States' rights, and Mr. Wallace has had to gain the better part of his support from a group of undesirables.

The electoral farce of 1948 will not be easily overlooked by the most cognizant younger voters, who would like nothing better than to see political forces in the future resolve themselves so that the voting public may be given a positive choice to make.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

A Too Familiar Feud

IN THE sea of troubles into which Thomas E. Dewey will soon be plunged as President of the United States, not the least troublesome will be the unending battle between the United States Navy and the United States Air Force. Secretary of Defense James Forrestal has made repeated and valiant efforts to settle this row. At Newport, R. I., last August, it was thought on all sides that he had succeeded. But since October 10, the battle has been joined again more fiercely than before. For on that day, the Air Force believes, the Navy "kicked the stuffings out of the Newport agreement."

The row is, of course, about the vital question of whether the Air Force should have final, overall responsibility for strategic bombing in case of war, or whether the Navy should have a major, independent strategic bombing role. This inevitably gives rise to a subsidiary battle about how big a slice of the defense pie each service should cut.

Two major attempts to settle the fight have already been made. The first was at Key West, Fla., in March, and the second was the Newport meeting last August. A final agreement was ostensibly reached at Newport. The Air Force would have "exclusive responsibility" for its "primary mission"—strategic bombing. The Navy would have similar responsibility for anti-submarine warfare. Thus, or so it seemed, the bitter dispute was at last ended.

YET, BENEATH the surface, the row is now flaming fiercely again. The reasons are simple. On October 10, the Navy made a "presentation" to the Committee on the Reorganization of the National Defense, one of the Hoover Commission groups. The chairman of the committee is Ferdinand Eberstadt. Mr. Eberstadt, as the Air Force is fully aware, is a leading candidate for Secretary of National Defense in Dewey's Cabinet.

At this presentation, Vice Admiral Arthur Radford, representing the Navy planners, urged on the committee the Navy view that the Navy should have a major independent role in strategic bombing by carrier-based aircraft. In the eyes of the Air Force, he went further than this.

He very clearly implied that the Air Force was not capable of performing the strategic bombing role assigned to it under the Newport agreement. One Navy man raised Air Force blood pressure to record heights by telling the committee that there were two kinds of air power—land-based air and mobile (or carrier-based) air—and that land-based air was "like a boxer with his feet stuck in concrete."

This sort of thing, in the Air Force view, is directly contrary to the Newport agreement. No public protest has yet been made by the Air Force—although such a protest is by no means impossible—but the Air Force is nevertheless seething with resentment.

NOR HAS the resentment been lessened by the announcement of the Navy's aircraft carrier-building program, which has followed hard on the heels of the Navy's presentation before the Eberstadt committee. Vice Admiral Earl W. Mills has announced that the Navy intends to start on a fleet of 28 carriers, centered on a huge 65,000-ton "supercarrier," over a thousand feet in length. This carrier is designed, of course, to take heavy bombers capable of delivering the atomic bomb. The Navy plan also calls for three 45,000-ton carriers with decks so reinforced that they too can receive long-range bombers.

The Navy thus clearly means to play a major independent role in strategic bombing—specifically in delivering the atom bomb—in case of war. Moreover, the Navy "supercarrier," with the flotilla of supporting escorts which it must have, may mean a total investment as high as one billion dollars. And this in turn suggests a subsidiary reason for the resentment of the Air Force.

THE FIGURE of $14,400,000,000 has already been named for next year's national defense budget. That is over nine billions less than the total of requests of all three services. If the Navy is to have a major strategic bombing responsibility, it will have to take a very large cut of this reduced national defense pie. This in turn means, the Air Force suspects, that the Air Force's 70-group program, approved by Congress last spring, will have to be disastrously reduced. The Air Force planners are convinced that the Air Force cannot successfully perform the mission assigned to it in case of war if the 70-group program is cut.

The Navy's supercarrier program, moreover, is viewed privately by the Air Force experts with the deepest skepticism. The supercarrier would have to operate close to enemy shores, and thus to land-based aircraft. And it would be a prize so valuable that it would justify almost any sacrifice to sink it. Moreover, the Navy has yet to find an effective counter to the menace of the new German Type 21 long-range, high-speed, radar-proof submarine, of which there are at least 250 in the Red fleet.

Whether this skepticism is justified or not, the plain fact is that, in the interests of national security, it is essential that the long-drawn-out feuding between the services be brought to an end. That should be, and no doubt is, a task high on the priority list of Thomas E. Dewey.

The Atom In Politics

ONE THING about this curious presidential campaign now drawing to a close is unique. The atom has for the first time in history got into politics.

Childs

Four years ago hardly anyone except a few scientists knew that the atom existed. This year both major party candidates devoted a major speech to the force that burst on the world with such terrifying suddenness at Hiroshima three years ago.

Because Candidate Dewey made the first speech he must take the blame for bringing the atom into the campaign. Avoiding any direct criticism of the policy of the Atomic Energy Commission, Dewey used the phrase "the dead hand of Government" which was obviously intended to make political headlines.

Aside from this catch phrase, what Dewey said does not differ greatly from what Chairman David Lilienthal of the Atomic Energy Commission has frequently said. That is that Government cannot do the job alone. It must be a partnership between science, industry and Government.

In his speech Candidate Truman said that atomic energy "should not be used to fatten the profits of big business." This ignores the fact that one of the AEC's problems has been to persuade business firms to take atomic development contracts. One of the biggest of big businesses said no, because of the fear of becoming involved in just the kind of political scrap that the Truman-Dewey speeches foreshadow.

ACTUALLY, from the beginning, when atomic fission was nothing but a gleam in Professor Einstein's eye, business has been in partnership with Government. Dewey is right when he says that it could never have been done without the vast know-how of industry. But neither could it have been done without the guiding direction of Government under the spur of war. The partnership is continuing. Industrial laboratories and universities have taken research contracts.

Anyone who looks at it without prejudice is bound to question whether atomic energy ever can be fitted into the competitive free-enterprise system as we have known it in the past. It is hard to imagine competing atomic-power plants. Like a city-wide electric power system, it must by its very nature be a monopoly. Furthermore, you begin with the fact that more than two billion dollars of taxpayers' money already have gone into atomic development.

There would be few to advocate that this be turned over to the small number of private companies that could operate and develop it. Certainly for the forseeable future, when atomic development is almost entirely concentrated on the military phase, the business-Government partnership is the most that can be hoped for.

AS THOUGH this aspect of the atom was not sufficiently overwhelming, dwarfing most ordinary considerations, the question of international control looms even larger. A change in the American policy on atomic energy and atomic weapon control can be expected from a Dewey Administration.

Among the Dewey advisers, who are so highly sensitive to public opinion and world reaction, the feeling is growing that the Baruch proposal for international control and policing of all atomic fission is now outdated. That is to say, they believe that neither Congress nor the public would be willing, after two years of Soviet resistance and denunciation, to yield so much authority over our own development to the United Nations.

Pressure has been put on Bernard M. Baruch, sponsor of the plan, to repudiate it publicly. Thus far he has refused, although it is believed that he shares the doubts over whether it would be accepted in the present heated climate of opinion.

Withdrawal of the Baruch proposal, so long and so persistently backed within the United Nations by all but Russia and the satellites, would leave a perilous vacuum. The Baruch Plan has stood like a great sky sign advertising America's willingness to sacrifice so much for security.

If it is to be withdrawn, then another plan must be framed to replace it. That kind of vacuum will be filled in one way or other. It cannot be ignored.

Atomic politics on the world level is even more frighteningly futile and stupid than on the national level. If the Russians had accepted the American plan two years ago, it would have meant an enormous stride forward toward world order. A step backward will be an equally long stride in the direction of atomic destruction.

Textron Head Defends Steps To 125-Million-a-Year Status

Boston, Oct. 26 (AP).—Textron President Royal Little today defended the "unusual transactions" that, he said, made Textron a 125 million dollar a year corporation, growing from an eight million dollar business in five years, and topped that by offering to open his family bank books to a Senate committee.

The 52-year-old textile magnate testified for four hours in answering charges brought by CIO Textile Union President Emil Rieve that his corporation was a "racket" using charitable trusts for "financial manipulation."

Little gave his answers—including those to 30 questions put to him in advance by the union—to a Senate subcommittee headed by United States Senator Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.).

Senator Tobey presided at the reopening of a hearing that began in September in Nashua, N. H., after union protests over Textron's announced closing of two mills in Nashua, employing 3500.

Gov. John Pastore of Rhode Island, where two other Textron mills were closed recently, joined in the protest.

The September hearing brought an agreement from Little that one Nashua plant—the Jackson mill employing about 1000—would continue to make sheeting through December 1949.

Little, leaning forward on a witness table with folded hands as he read calmly, declared:

"Mr. Rieve has endeavored to create the impression that I have personally profited at the expense of Textron by these transactions.

"I am formally requesting this committee to investigate my personal financial situation and the financial situation of the members of my family."

Charles W. Tobey, jr., the Senator's son and committee counsel, asked earlier for information on "all companies of the Textron empire" and for an accounting of six charitable trusts set up by the corporation.

One of these, the Rhode Island Charities Trust, Little testified, was founded to support the Providence Community Fund and grew from his original donation of $500 to $4,500,000.

Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath, Little reported, is one of the three trustees of this fund.

In the Nashua hearing, union heads cited Textron's charitable trusts frequently. Rieve said the money in the trusts "has been readily available for Mr. Little to speculate with."

Senator Tobey drew from Little the statement that the Textron trusts did permit the trustees "to speculate in the most violent form."

Little added, however, that he never received any personal benefit from the trusts.

Textron has used trusts by selling assets to them and then leasing those assets back from them in order to get working capital, Little contended.

The Textron president held that "the force of inventory tax laws has driven venture capital into trusts of this sort where the risk is worthwhile."

Little contended that Textron "has attracted venture capital to New England" and added concerning the Jackson mill plan for continued operation:

"If this joint venture is successful, we will have set a pattern for saving New England's cotton textile industry."

Straw Chewer Finds He's No Hay Burner

He always had a stomach ache, too. Now he knows why.

Removed from Paddy at the hospital: two balls of straw, total weight one pound 12 ounces.

CIO Protests Hoover Group Is Partial to 'Big Business'

The CIO protested yesterday that "big business" alone has been consulted in most of the preliminary work of former President Herbert Hoover's Commission on Federal Government Reorganization.

It demanded the right to study reports of "special importance" to organized labor and present its recommendations before the commission files its formal proposals to Congress next year.

James B. Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer, said in a letter to Mr. Hoover that labor has been consulted only by two or three of the 20 "task forces" named by the commission to prepare preliminary proposals for overhauling and streamlining the Government.

"Your commission's reports can not possibly be impartial as long as you have heard only the views of one organized segment of American life—big business," he wrote.

He said the CIO was "especially concerned" by published reports a month ago that the commission would recommend elimination of "essential services of the Department of Labor and the Social Security administration.

"Recent statements about overhauling the Government have pointed to a danger . . . that its (the commission's) conclusions may be used to justify a reshuffling of agencies that will disrupt their functioning and flaunt Civil Service procedures."

Sidney Mitchell, secretary of the Hoover Commission, denied any elimination of "essential" Labor Department and Social Sercurity services is planned. He said a study of Government functions was made by George W. Taylor, University of Pennsylvania professor, who formerly was chairman of the old War Labor Board.

For Quarter

World Bank Reports Net Of $2,317,723

The World Bank yesterday reported net income or "profit" of $2,317,723 for the July-September period, the first quarter of its current fiscal year.

The bank had an operating loss of $877,686 in the same period last year.

The next profit figure for the quarter was exclusive of $1,206,311 which was put into a special reserve against losses on loans. Apart from the reserve fund, expenses were $2,767,989. Gross income was $6,292,023.

A financial statement issued by the 48-nation bank also showed:

Total subscribed capital is now $8,336,000,000. Member nations are required to pay in only 20 per cent of that unless an emergency develops.

Loans on September 30 totalled $509,000,000, of which $490,776,505 had been disbursed. Denmark had an unused balance of $15,012,487. Luxembourg had one of $3,211,008. Further outstanding is $16,000,000 in commitments to Chile subject to ratification by the Chilean government.

Principal sources of income for the first fiscal quarter were $3,875,087 in interest on loans and $1,206,311 in loan commissions. Principal expense items were $620,688 for salaries and wages and $101,751 for travel.

Distribution Threat Seen

Boston, Oct. 26 (AP).—Federal Trade Commissioner Lowell B. Mason charged today that bureaucracy is pushing freedom of choice out of the American system of distribution.

Addressing the Boston Conference of Distribution, Mason said he did not think economists could give assurance the system would continue free and competitive.

He referred to recent court decisions approving FTC cases concerning the distribution of cement, conduit, crepe, corn and salt.

Charles Sawyer, Secretary of Commerce, said there is no salvation ahead if the only concern in promoting American business is "to keep profits and wages as high as the traffic will bear."

American business, the Secretary declared, has the obligation of examining its responsibility to the economy as a whole.

ECA Grants Britain Loan of 310 Millions

The delayed Marshall Plan lending program rolled forth yesterday with a 310-million-dollar loan to Britain and ECA disclosure that more than 500 million dollars recovery credits for nine other nations are slated within a fortnight.

An Economic Cooperation Administration official said that a 60-million-dollar credit for Ireland is "imminent." Major loans of 170 million dollars for France and 80 million for Holland, plus 15 million for the Netherlands East Indies will be signed shortly, he said. The sums are approximate.

The British loan, to be repaid over 35 years starting in 1956, is this country's first credit to England since the $3,750,000,000 British loan of 1946. The hard-pressed Britons exhausted it in little more than a year.

Yesterday's announcement, made jointly by ECA and the Export-Import Bank of Washington, marked the much-delayed start of ECA's lending program. Congress specified that about one billion of the the $5,055,000,000 Marshall Plan funds for the first year must be restricted to loans rather than outright gifts.

The lona agreement contains an escape clause if Britain finds herself too short of dollars to make repayment on schedule. If "adverse economic conditions" prevail, payment of interest or principal or both may be postponed upon agreement between this country and England.

The interest rate, 2½ per cent, probably will govern the other loans granted, the ECA official reported. A minor credit to Iceland already granted, $2,300,000 at 3 per cent for fishery development, likely will be revised to conform.

Payments on the principal will be made by Britain semiannually starting in 1956. Interest payments will start in 1952.

The United Kingdom, the announcement said, will use the loan primarily for industrial machinery, equipment and raw materials.

Britain issued promissory note to the Export-Import Bank for 310 million dollars, while ECA allotted the same amount to the Bank. The Bank, which administers ECA's lending affairs, will pay out the money as Britain calls for it.

The other loans pending, in approximate amounts, include Belgium-Luxembourg, 50 million dollars; Denmark, 25 million dollars; Italy, 50 million dollars; Norway, 35 million dollars; Sweden, 10 million dollars and Turkey, 30 million dollars.

Two of the Russian satellite countries, Poland and Hungary, were named yesterday as suppliers of Marshall Plan shipments to be furnished under ECA's grants.

Hungary will furnish freight cars valued at one million dollars to bizone Germany and Poland will provide coal worth $825,000 to Austria.

Citizens Ask More Prince Georges Police; Not Sufficient Funds, Say Commissioners

Increased police protection for Prince Georges County was requested by the county Civic Federation yesterday at a meeting of the board of county commissioners in Upper Marlboro, Md.

Six members of the Federation's police committee headed by Daniel M. Greene of Avondale, chairman, and President Walter F. Mulligan of Berwyn presented a four-point program to the commissioners.

The group asked that the police force be increased by nine temporary appointees to complete the quota of 51 allowed by law; that the General Assembly be requested to authorize increase of the police force to a size commensurate with the increased population and assessable base of the county; that one central service station be designated where all police cars will be serviced; that an annual report be presented showing funds received and expended by the police force.

No Funds Available

Harry W. McNamee, president of the board, told the civic leaders that the commissioners will be glad to cooperate in improving the police department but that no funds are available at this time.

President McNamee was named representative of the commissioners on the board of the Prince Georges General Hospital at Cheverly, a post which also makes him president of the hospital board. He succeeds the late William A. Carson.

Church Exemption

The commissioners voted tax exemption for a Seventh-day Adventist Church at 4105 54th st., Decatur Heights, of which [illegible]v. Russell Quackenbush is pastor.

[illegible]ative day nurseries in Hyattsville were granted to the Hyattsville Kindergarten Association. One is at 4201 Gallatin st. and the other at 5204 42nd pl.

The Hyattsville City Council had asked last week that the permits be held up until the council could act upon them but no objection was voiced by the council. A petition signed by 16 nearby homeowners protesting the schools was filed.

The commissioners approved construction of a 26-foot wide bituminous top roadway for two streets in Bradbury Heights, Special Improvement District 29. They were W st. between 51st and 53rd sts. and 51st st. betwene V and W sts. County Engineer Arthur W. Tayman will prepare specifications and advertise for bids within a short time.

The commissioners granted a permit to operate a day nursery at 5992 Suitland rd. near Moringside, to Audrey Holmes.

Steinbeck's Wife Called To Inquest

Reno, Nev., Oct. 26 (AP).—Mrs. Gwyn Conger Steinbeck, estranged wife of novelist John Steinbeck, will be summoned to an inquest Tnursday in the death of Leonard H. Wolff, 28, authorities said today.

Mrs. Steinbeck

The body of Wolff, World War II flier and son of a wealthy Denver family, was found on the desert near here early Saturday with a bullet wound in the head. District Attorney Harold O. Tabor said Wolff had lost approximately $86,000 at blackjack a few hours earlier.

Coroner Laurance Layman said Mrs. Steinbeck accompanied Wolff to a gambling club where he wrote three checks to cover his losses. Later, the coroner added, he took Mrs. Steinbeck home to the guest ranch where she is staying.

Layman termed Wolff's death wound self-inflicted but said the father, Jacob Wolff of Denver, refused to accept the conclusion.

Falls Church Sells Million in Water Bonds

The Falls Church City Council last night sold a million dollar water bond issue to Scott, Horner & Mason of Lynchburg, Va., on their bid of 2.79 per cent interest.

This bid for the bonds to construct a new city water supply system was described as "very favorable" by City Attorney LaRue Van Meter.

The bond sale marked the first major credit venture of the former town, which became a second-class Virginia city August 16.

Its new water system will link Falls Church almost directly to the Dalecarlia Reservoir in Washington.

According to the figures of city officials, the new system would leave Falls Church a net surplus of $2,706,130 at the end of 35 years.

Falls Church counts on an estimated $7,828,700 in revenue from sale of water during the 35-year period. It now gets most of its water from Arlington County.

Cost of the water and operating expenses would be $3,674,800 during the period. Retirement of the million dollar bond issue, plus the expense of a separate Potomac crossing for the Falls Church main in 1955, would cost $1,447,769.

Weighed against water income, the total cost of $5,122,569 over 35 years would thus leave a $2,706,130 surplus.

Gun Registry Fight Urged

The National Rifle Association yesterday reaffirmed its stand to fight legislation that would require general registration of firearms.

C. B. Lister, executive director of the association, addressing delegates and members in a four-day convention at the Shoreham Hotel, said gun registration would hinder seriously the marksmen training programs now under way in the United States, and could imperil national defense.

Lister explained that registration would discourage sportsmen from buying guns, thus reducing the number of men proficient in their use and said he considered a central list of citizens possessing that could fall into the hands of subversive groups.

Although the association favors the Federal gun laws now in existence, Lister urged every member to oppose a general registration of guns on a municipal, State or Federal level.

The convention, attended by more than 1000 members and delegates, continued in its second day yesterday with a fashion show for the feminine guests, panel discussions of firearms and an exhibit showing the latest developments in the firearm industry.

Doe Will Take Engineer Post

Frederick H. Doe, jr., 35, will become the sanitary engineer for Arlington November 1, County Manager A. T. Lundberg announced yesterday.

His new position, which pays $4960 a year, was formerly held by Richard M. Wirt, now Arlington's director of public service.

World Declared Only Jump Ahead of Famine Despite Record Crop Production of Year

In spite of this year's all-time record crops, the world is just one jump ahead of famine, Norris E. Dodd, director general of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization, told Maryland extension workers at Annapolis yesterday.

There is no surplus food in the world, Dodd said. If this country should experience a drought such as occurred in 1935, even the United States might have to resort to bread rationing next year, he declared.

Europe this year has the best growing weather in 30 years, following 1947 with the smallest harvests since the days of Napoleon. But still yields are below prewar yields, with much larger populations to feed. Only three countries in Europe have production up to prewar levels, Dodd said, naming Sweden, Switzerland and the United Kingdom. As a whole, Europe's food production is 26 per cent below prewar production.

Today the Maryland extension directors, with technicians from the University of Maryland, will make a tour of soil conservation areas in Anne Arundel County.

Six New Home Finance Peaks Recorded Here

By S. Oliver Goodman

Washington's 27 home finance institutions registered six new all-time highs in the year ended September 30, their chieftains were told last night. Occasion was the annual business meeting of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League, at which all officers were reelected.

League Secretary F. Willson Camp, addressing more than 175 savings and loan officials and their guests in the Mayflower, reported these figures (all new records):

Combined assets 350 million dollars, up 31 million.

Combined loans 319 million, up 33 million.

Share investments (deposits) 284 million, up million.

Reserves 29 million, up 2 million.

New loans 125 million dollars for 15,000 families, busiest 12-month period in league's history.

More than 200,000 individuals as patrons either as buying or investing members.

Following usual practice, officers of the league were renamed for a second term as follows: Edward L. McAleer, president; Fred A. Smith, vice president; Camp, secretary; Robert E. Buckley, treasurer, and C. Clinton James, general counsel. Members of the executive committee were elected as follows: R. L. Houston Jones, Edward K. Jones, Edmund M. Emmerich, John P. Balster, William H. Dyer and Martin A. Cook.

Guest speaker was Frank C. Waldrop, editor of the Times-Herald who outlined the future of private property. President McAleer gave an inspirational address.

WILL MOVE HERE: Operational headquarters of All-American Airways will be moved from Wilmington, Del., to Washington National Airport by January 1, the company reported yesterday. Executive offices had been located in Wilmington since 1943. About 100 employes are involved in the shift.

Business Outlook

End of Rent Control Will Hit Retailers as Well as Tenants

By J. A. Livingston

THE Wall Street Journal has just completed an 11-city survey which augurs no good to housewives and retailers. Apparently apartments are becoming somewhat easier to find and rent.

At first blush, that might be regarded as good news for the homemaker or the merchandiser. It signifies that the housing shortage is being licked. So, doubled-up families can undouble, which implies more comfort in living and more furniture and furnishings to be bought. But there's a catch. If housing is more plentiful, if apartments are seeking occupants, then rent control is not as necessary as it used to be. It's bound to come off. Its months, certainly its years, are numbered.

Livingston

Householders today are using "rent money"—money that used to go to the landlord—for other things. When rent control lapses or is eased, their standards of living will suffer. And sellers generally are going to have to share with landlords some of this postwar prosperity.

Today 70 out of every 100 consumer dollars are spent at retail. But in prewar days, the butcher, the baker, and the lipstick maker, as well as the clothier, barber and furniture dealer, figured to corral only 55 per cent to 60 per cent of consumer income. The rest went for recreation, medical care, electricity, gas, savings, rent, etc.

TO THE EXTENT that landlords have not been able to charge the market price, they have subsidized consumers, retailers and the economy generally. To be sure, fewer vacancies and the elimination of redecoration have saved them money. Landlords have not been exactly impoverished. But in a market in which farm prices are up 180 per cent since 1939 and textile prices 117 per cent, landlords have been put under wraps.

As the Wall Street Journal puts it, "In Cleveland, one apartment building, about five years old, with controlled rents, has three-room units at $78 a month; 200 feet away, another building, almost exactly the same, but new, costs $110 for similar units." Or again: "An average rent on a new one-bedroom flat runs between $80 and $82.50 a month in crowded Portland, Oreg. A controlled rental apartment of similar type gets $47.50."

Thus, a two-rent system exists in the United States. The end of rent control will bring the two markets together. Ceilinged houses will go up in price, but because a free market prevails, new house rents will tend to drop. Irresistibly, the pattern of consumer spending which prevailed before the war will tend to come back. Then rent absorbed 19 per cent of consumer expenditures and food 32 per cent as against 12 per cent and 42 per cent, respectively, nowadays.

Item	Importance 1939	Today
Rent	18.9%	12.3%
Food	32.4	41.9
Apparel	11.2	12.2
Fuel, elec., etc.	6.2	5.2
House furn.	4.1	4.8
Miscellaneous*	27.2	23.6
	100.0%	100.0%

*Recreation, medical care, tobacco transportation, personal care, taxes, etc.

The reason for the shift is clear. Because of continued ceilings, rentals have increased only 14 per cent since 1939, as against a rise of 126 per cent in food prices, 100 per cent in clothing, 39 per cent in fuel, electricity, ice, etc.; 96 per cent in house-furnishings, and 52 per cent for miscellaneous items. As a whole, the consumers price index has gone up 76 per cent.

The lapse, when it comes, will pinch lower-income families worst. The Federal Reserve Board survey of consumer finances recently showed that families with incomes of less than $2000 a year use 21 per cent of their income on rent as compared with 13 per cent for families with incomes between $2000 and $5000 and 9 per cent for families with incomes over $5000.

THAT EXPLAINS why rent control has lasted longer than other controls. It has many friends and few enemies. It benefits the great majority: Consumers and nearly everybody who cater to consumers, including merchants, farmers, manufacturers and Congressmen.

There's economic logic as well as political logic behind rent control. Housing can't be produced on demand. A small home these days may take six to nine months. It takes even longer to establish an inventory from which would-be tenants can pick and choose. So some protection against gouging is essential.

Nevertheless, as the Wall Street Journal article indicates, an inventory is now being established. That's an augury—a warning—that (a) rent control won't last forever and (b) the retailer dollar is due to shrink.

Dividend Flow Continues at Lavish Rate

Corporations yesterday continued to announce higher, extra or stock dividends with a lavish hand. Those of special Washington interest follow:

Norfolk & Western Railway declared an extra dividend of $1 a share and a quarterly dividend of 75 cents on its $25 par common stock, payable December 10 to stockholders of record November 10.

Southern Railway Co. declared a quarterly dividend of $1, payable December 15, to stockholders of record November 15. The company, which previously paid 75 cents quarterly, said the declaration puts its stock on a $4 annual dividend basis.

Westinghouse Electric Corp. declared an extra dividend of 25 cents on common stock in addition to the quarterly payment of 25 cents payable December 1 to stockholders of record November 8.

Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., Inc., declared the usual quarterly dividend of 25 cents, plus an extra dividend in stock payable at the rate of two shares for each 100 held. Both dividends are payable December 10 to stockholders of record November 5.

International Business Machines Corp. declared a stock dividend of 5 per cent on outstanding capital shares, issuable January 28—or as soon thereafter as practicable—to stockholders of record January 7. The company also declared the usual quarterly dividend of $1, payable December 10, record November 23.

United Engineering & Foundry Co. declared the usual quarterly of 75 cents on common and a special of like amount, both payable November 16 to shareholders of record November 5. This brings the company's dividends for 1948 to $3.75, as against $2 disbursed in four dividends of 50 cents each last year.

Servel, Inc., declared a dividend of 50 cents a share on the common, payable December 15 to stock of record November 23. This brings 1948 payments to $1 against 30 cents in 1947.

Bigelow-Sanford Carpet Co. declared a quarterly dividend of 60 cents and an extra of 60 cents on the common, both payable December 1 to stock of record November 15. In 1947 four payments of $1 each were made and in March of this year $1 was paid. In April the stock was split two for one. Since that time the stock has been receiving dividends of 50 cents.

Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. declared a dividend of 65 cents on common, payable January 5 to stock of record December 3. Previously the company paid 50 cents at quarterly intervals.

American Can Co. declared a special dividend of $1 on its common stock payable December 15 to shares of record November 24. It was the first special dividend in more than 10 years and, added to the 75-cent quarterly disbursement to be made November 15, will bring the total for 1948 to $4 a share compared with $3 in 1947.

Pepco Returns Fall Short of 5½% Limit

The possibility of a request for another rate increase was posed yesterday by a report filed by the Potomac Electric Power Co. with the District Public Utilities Commission.

The firm noted in a required report on the first nine months of operations under the "modified sliding scale plan" that the earned return was $839,370 short of the 5½ per cent basic return allowed by PUC.

Pepco reported that taking the first nine months' results and prorating this over a 12-month period, the earned return would reach $4,716,231, as compared with the $5,555,602 authorized under the 5½-per-cent return.

At present, the firm is holding $713,511 in a deferred credit account. Under the terms of the sliding scale plan, if the return is less than the basic return, "an amount equal to the deficiency, or the balance in the deferred credit account, whichever is smaller, shall be transferred from the deferred credit account to the income of the company for the year under review."

This means that if the PUC staff and the commission itself find the figures in the report are correct, the firm will be permitted to apply the $713,511 toward its reported deficiency of $839,370. The remainder may be sought in the form of a rate increase under the plan.

If the firm had reported a return in excess of the allowable return, half of the excess would have gone to the company and the remainder to customers in the form of rebates.

The present preliminary report will be checked by the PUC staff and a recommendation of action made to the commission on or before November 15, under the plan.

The firm will file a final report on or before March 1, 1949, giving the actual figures, rather than prorated ones, and these will be the subject of a public hearing before the PUC. The PUC will then take final action on whether or not to permit use of the deferred credit fund.

A $2,750,000 increase in electricity rates was authorized July 8 by PUC on the strength of increased coal and labor costs. This boost amounted to nearly 10 cents a week additional on the average homeowner's electric bill.

Canal Slayer Seeks Parole

A District man who drowned his wife and her daughter in the C. & O. Canal in 1931 to collect his wife's insurance, is one of 19 Lorton (Va.) Reformatory inmates who will seek parole at hearings Thursday at 1:30 p. m.

Howard C. Dickerson, alias Harry C. Wimbley, and an accomplice, John M. Crowder, were convicted of second-degree murder in the drownings. The District Court of Appeals upheld the conviction and the United States Supreme Court refused to review the case.

Shortly before the drownings, Dickerson took out a $10,000 accident insurance policy on his wife, the court found. The court also found that Dickerson forged his wife's name on the policy.

Also seeking parole:

Macco Broadus, 48, who was convicted of second degree murder in the death of Robert Lee Jackson.

Frank Griggs, 52, of 903 M st. nw., held without bond for grand jury action on December 26, 1946, for the fatal stabbing of his alleged common-law wife.

John Solis, jr., charged with housebreaking and two cases of grand larceny on August 24, 1946, for robbing unlocked hotel rooms here.

Also:

Rachele H. Baptiste, Louise Alice Jones, Leon A. Jones, for a rehearing; Robert H. Taylor, Ernest Tafford, Fred Williams, Junius M. Jackson, Wilbert H. Wells, James Alexander, Eugene Cole, jr., Robert Simmons, Henry Ashton, Walter E. Jones, Willie N. Jackson and Johnny Joseph Green.

Man Married 8 Years Wins An Annulment

John A. Aruta, 40, a commercial photographer, was granted an annulment of his eight-year-old marriage in District Court yesterday on the grounds that his wife suffers from psychogenic impotency.

Aruta, who lives at 905 Webster st. nw., said in his suit that he and his wife Alice were married in 1940 but the marriage was never consummated because of her condition.

He said that after several temporary separations, they finally agreed in 1946 to a permanent separation. The annulment was granted by Judge Edward A. Tamm.

On the Town

THURSDAY seems to have been our boner day. I suppose we could blame it on the fog if there had been one, but instead we'll just confess that for a moment our mind went a little astray. As a result, we missed giving proper credit to a fellow who deserved it.

ZAMORA

If you remember back to last Friday when we were tossing bouquets at the comic in the new Cairo floor show, we called him Alan Gale. 'Taint so; the name is really Alan Drake, and since we mentioned the name Gale twice in the column, we should rectify it right here and now: Alan Drake is a very good comic. Alan Drake is a very good comic.

All kidding aside, the boy is good and should be seen. The show at the Cairo goes into its last week tonight, and is still sure-fire entertainment. Yvette (time out for a long sigh) heads the show, and well she should. Her songs, both romantic and novelty, threw us into a spin that hasn't slowed down a bit.

Tonight'll be the last night to catch Maurice Rocco at the Crossroads. He's had a whizbang engagement there and the club is trying to find an open week or two in his schedule later on in the season to bring him back. When we saw him opening night, the crowds just didn't want to let him go.

Flora Zamora takes over the dancing spot in the new Balalaika show tomorrow night. She's a bit on the young side, but has played some of the leading European clubs. She's presented to us, via a press release, as a doer of "passionate dances of the Spanish gypsies." Hmmm!

Of course Karavieff, the Russian turned continental, is being held over because of his kazotski dancing and twist of humor. (P. S. If you know of a better way to spell that fatiguing Russian dance, we'd love to know it.)

The first Name Bands, Inc., dance of the season will take place at the Armory November 20. To start things off with a bang, they've booked Vaughn Monroe, who was a sellout long before his last engagement here almost a year ago. The finals of the "Nation's Capital Glamour Girl" contest also will be held at the Armory that night, with Monroe as top judge. The prize for the lucky gal will be a weekend at the Brighton Hotel in Atlantic City, plus an evening dress and a traveling suit. We'd guess that any interested lovelies could enter the contest by calling Name Bands.

The Messrs. Brahms and Mitchell, who own Olmsted's, received a letter from their friend, Frank Fay, the other day. Frank made the restaurant his headquarters when he played the lead in "Harvey" here. Frank is in Boston now and plans to play the lead in Hamlet soon. He's pretty certain of success, he says, because "in both plays the main characters seem to keep seeing things."

Those of you who want to be right on hand to collect your election bet drinks will be glad to hear that most of the bars and such that feature Muzark will be broadcasting the election returns right up to closing time.

The Neptune Room booked the Nat Conway trio back after a brief six months' absence in response to a flood of requests from the customers. The boys do a good job on the South American rhythms, although they don't specialize in them.

Alan Martin Warmly Praised For Playing of Four Sonatas

By Paul Hume

Alan Martin displayed remarkable gifts of musicianship and personal style last night in a four-sonata recital at the Institute of Contemporary Arts.

To his great credit, he played music by Mandel, Bach, Mozart, and Aaron Copland on little more than two weeks' notice, and did it well. If notes went flying off the beam here and there, they went their way amid some genuinely informed playing.

Of the classic writers, Handel fared best, in his broad extrovertish vein. Martin lined out the square periods of the baroque master with disciplined enthusiasm.

Aaron Copland's sonata is wonderfully alive, with an air of inner content at having been written. Its moods alternate between that idyllic serenity of his Appalachian Spring, and an unceasing vigor in moving passages. Martin played the sonata with absolute rightness, and his announcement of the final movement made glad the ear and heart.

Mozart and Bach fared less smoothly, not through any lack of comprehension on the part of the players, but because there are just so many sonatas which can be mastered in two weeks. Time will place them securely in Alan Martin's fingers and mind, and we look forward to hearing him play them again.

Harry McClure gave the finest support we have yet heard from him and in the Bach Sonata proved a true exponent of the master.

Army Turns Over Youth Accused in Holdup to County

A youthful Ohio soldier, said to be the third member of a trio that took about $76 in a gasoline station holdup October 12 near Upper Marlboro, Md., was turned over to Prince Georges County police yesterday.

He had been AWOL since October 15 and surrendered yesterday to Bolling Field authorities, who turned him over to police. The youth told police he is only 16 years old and enlisted under his brother's name and age.

Two 18-year-olds, William Wachter, jr., of Union City, N. J., and Pvt. Truman W. Clarke, Cleveland, Ohio, were indicted for armed robbery of the Marlboro Pike filling station by a grand jury and pleaded guilty when arraigned last week.

The third youth, a native of Canton, Ohio, is being held for Juvenile Court pending verification of his age.

Jury Indicts VA Aide

New Orleans, Oct. 26 (AP).—A Federal grand jury yesterday indicted a former Commerce Department employe and four others on charges of conspiring to export illegally 4,450,000 pounds of rice in violation of the Export Control law.

Named in the 10-count indictment were:

Ethan Robert F. Thompson, former rice export licensing officer, Office of International Trade, United States Department of Commerce. He lives at 300 Aspen st. nw.

Joseph Louis Cardona, Chicago food broker.

Christopher E. Jones, Chicago attorney.

Warrants were issued by United States District Judge Herbert Christenberry and bond set at $5000 each.

The indictment covers the period between December 1, 1945, and March 19, 1946.

In Washington, Thompson was not reachable, but his wife said he left the Department of Commerce two years ago and now is with the Veterans Administration.

One on the Aisle—

Eve Arden Touch Salvages 'Venus'

By Richard L. Coe

"ONE TOUCH OF VENUS," at Keith's, is light and unpretentious. While its fantasy isn't exactly enchanting, no picture with Eve Arden is a complete loss.

I missed this Mary Martin musical of the war years, so I don't know exactly what changes have been made. Ava Gardner is now playing the classical statue which comes to life at the kiss of a department store window dresser. It seems to me that in not trying to drag out a slight notion into two hours, the producers have been wise in limiting the running time (82 minutes).

The story finds Robert Walker as a lower level employe entrusted with preparing for the store head the unveiling of a priceless Venus that art lover has spent years tracking down. In a relaxed moment he kisses the statue, brings her to life, alienates his girl friend and starts on a chase with the police.

With Miss Arden as the rich merchant's dewy-eyed secretary, the picture is at its best. Eve's tart observations are delivered with that worldly quality that's hers alone. You'll relish Ava, too, as she strides about in diaphanous splendor. Olga San Juan is cute as the baffled shopgirl, Walker mugs effectively as the baffled lad and Dick Haymes sings "Speak Low" and "Don't Look Now, But My Heart Is Showing." Third of the Kurt Weill-Ogden Nash numbers to be included by Musical Arranger Ann Ronell is "That's Him," a trio for the ladies.

"One Touch of Venus" isn't the picture to go out of your way to see, but it's a mild diversion for an empty hour.

THE CAST

Eddie Hatch	Robert Walker
Venus	Ava Gardner
Joe Grant	Dick Haymes
Molly Stewart	Eve Arden
Gloria	Olga San Juan
Whitfield Sayers	Tom Conway
Corrigan	James Flavin
Landlady	Sara Allgood

THIS, as the curious phrase has it, is Navy Day Week, and Thursday at the Palace also will be Texas Day . . . In honor of "Red River," the Howard Hawks film which has had an enviable press up nawth . . . Acting President Dale Miller of the Texas State Society is informing his 1800 members to that effect, and Gov. Beauford H. Jester is adding to the hoopla by turning publicity man: "Red River,...," he proclaims, "is the greatest motion picture of our time."

MARLENE DIETRICH fans should be turning out en masse to join the Corcoran Art Gallery membership this season, for her famed "The Blue Angel" will be the first in a series of 10 revivals sponsored by the gallery . . . Others on the list will include "Don Q," "David Harum," "The Long Voyage Home" and "Alexander Nevsky" . . . The German film will be shown Friday night in the gallery's auditorium, New York ave. entrance, at 8:30 and will be preceded by a short feature, "Memling" . . . The revival series is primarily for members of the gallery, but a limited number of seats will be open to the public at no charge at 8:25.

FROM THE MAIL BAG: A Virginia gentleman is struck by the fact that Jane Wyman's performance in the Warner's "Johnny Belinda" is outstanding if only because she's a woman who doesn't say a word for two hours . . . Asks that his name be withheld . . . Chap asks if William Smithers, playing the Earl of Gloucester in C. U.'s "King Lear," is the same William Smithers who played Thomas Jefferson for Williamsburg's first season of "The Common Glory" . . . Richard Gordon, by the way, violently disagrees with this corner's "King Lear" notice . . . Charming letter from Cathedral ave. asking why Folger Library doesn't take heed from the Olivier "Hamlet" and open up its handsome auditorium for Shakespearean performances the general public can see.

LIBBY HOLMAN said hello to the press yesterday afternoon, talking of the "new musical form" which she'll present tonight and tomorrow night at Pierce Hall for Productions, Inc . . . The almost legendary Libby has come a long way since "Moanin' Low" in "The Little Show" . . . That 1929 opening night was memorable: Fred Allen did "The Still Alarm" and Clifton Webb danced . . . Now Libby is on a tour presenting native folk music born in the Southeast . . . Deems Taylor speaks highly of the fresh approach Libby and Pianist Gerald Cook have given to these "Earth Songs" . . . Reservations at HUdson 9288.

NIPPY WEATHER means nothing to the drive-in theaters . . . E. M. Loew's Open Air, on the Richmond hghwy. and grandpappy of the local lot, is steaming along and is booked up to mid-November; the Airport schedule has just come in for the first week in December, and Sidney Lust's at Beltsville doesn't even admit the leaves are turning.

IRA WALSH gets a note of commendation from A. Julian Brylawski, recently elected to head the District's theater exhibitors for the umpteenth time, for the Walsh handling of Sunday night's United Nations Day pageant in Constitution Hall . . . The courtly Brylawski is particularly anxious that Walsh receive public thanks, for the chap is about to leave WWDC for labors in another vineyard.

THE COLUMBIA'S swell double bill—the South Pole sights in "The Secret Land" and the Marx Brothers' laughs in "A Night at the Opera"—will be holding over at least two days, through Friday . . . which, as anyone who's seen this juicy bill, is a natural, though it would seem all the more natural just to keep things set thataway for another full week . . . Speaking of the Columbia, it and the other Loew houses, the Palace and the Capitol, are scheduling special Halloween midnight shows Saturday night.

TODAY'S OPENING is "Portrait of Innocence" at the Dupont, a French film originally titled, "Nous Les Gosses" . . . This is a story of the urchins of the Parisian back alleys, with Louise Carletti and Gilbert Gil featured.

TONIGHT, TOO, in New York, Catholic University's Alumna Elizabeth Ross will be getting telegrams from her old speech and drama fellows . . . Betsy and Equity President Clarence Derwent top the supporting east for Josephine Hull and Eddie Dowling in Richard Hughes' comedy, "Minnie and Mr. Williams," which John Gassner and David Dietz will present at the Morosco . . . Local theatergoers will remember Betsy from "Song of Bernadette" at C. U.

RELUCTANT ROBERT: Ava Gardner plays a Grecian statue come to life and, what's worse for Robert Walker, complete infatuation for the chap whose kiss did the trick. The film from the musical comedy is now at Keith's

She Looks Older In New Hair-Do

She rose to stardom as the curly-haired "Little Miss Marker," produced in Hollywood in 1934. Her name is Shirley Temple.

"Before"

"The haircut was Selznick's idea," said Shirley, "but I'm getting used to it."

The child star of years ago—now a 19-year-old mother—has to look more mature for her next film, "Mr. Belvedere Goes to College," in which she'll play a war widow and mother of a child. (See other picture on Page 1.)

Canada to Refortify East Coast, Paper Says

Halifax, N. S., Oct. 26 (U.P.).—The Halifax Mail said yesterday that Canada's east coast soon will be refortified with long-range, radar-equipped guns.

The newspaper said coastal fortresses near here which were dismantled following V-E Day are due to be reequipped and rebuilt.

Mountbatten in New Post

London, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Adm. Earl Mountbatten, former Viceroy of India, left by air yesterday for Malta where he will take command of the Mediterranean fleet.

Carnegie Kin, Cowgirl, in Ousted Group

Geneva, Switzerland, Oct. 26 (AP).—Swiss police today expelled into France an American rodeo troupe, including one bronco-busting cowgirl who identified herself as Mrs. Katherine Carnegie, estranged wife of socially prominent Thomas M. Carnegie, jr.

Mrs. Carnegie

Mrs. Carnegie, who said her husband is a great-grandnephew of Andrew Carnegie, was put across the border with 39 other members of the Larry Sunbrock Rodeo and Thrill Circus. The troupe was involved Sunday night in a free-for-all battle with Swiss police.

Mrs. Carnegie said she joined the rodeo in New York because she was desperate for a job.

She said she rode her first bronco in Antwerpt and injured her knee and hip.

Sunbrock said he had been forced to pay the 1000-franc prize to the Swiss customer who claimed to have ridden the show's toughest horse for 10 seconds. Sunbrock claimed the customer hadn't won. That was what started the ruckus with customers and police Sunday night.

$114,897 More Goes Into Chest Fund

New receipts totaling $114,897.73 were reported yesterday in the 1949 Red Feather drive for $4,566,790.

Some 200 volunteers for Business Units I and II, at a luncheon in Hotel Washington, turned in 8127 new gifts. The latest figures brought Business Unit I to 28.65 per cent of its $1,785,271 goal; Business Unit II stood at 16.21 per cent of its $364,390 quota.

Miss Gertrude Bowling, executive director of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, and the principal speaker, described the work of several agencies which receive financial support from the Community Chest. She urged "every citizen" to demonstrate his "faith and generosity" by making a gift in the campaign.

Chauncey G. Parker, campaign chairman, said 150,000 area residents have made donations so far, 123,000 in Government. He implored workers to "keep 'em rolling," saying he wanted to "see this thing well over the two-million-dollar mark" by the general report luncheon Friday.

Aaron Goldman, chairman of area two in Business Unit II, suggested to workers that they try to get "installment" gifts. He held that "9 out of 10 prospects are genuinely generous" when confronted with the facts.

Today, at 12:30 p. m., hundreds of residential unit volunteers will report at a luncheon meeting in Hotel Washington. Mrs. Raymond Clapper, author and widow of the columnist, will speak.

Community Chest Federation funds will give the USO a boost for the benefit of peacetime draftees

Two men on crutches and a Gold Star mother of World War II went out to Washington National Airport yesterday to greet Movie Star John Hodiak—in behalf of the USO.

The actor stopped here briefly on a swing of USO installations. The three who met him are honorary members of the Community Chest Federation here, which is now raising funds to help support the USO.

The delegation was composed of Corpl. Paul Zimmaro, Corpl Hester Lunsford and WAC Sergt. Bertha Redman, whose son was killed during a neutrality patrol flight in 1940. Their addresses are Wards 32, 36 and 59 of Walter Reed General Hospital.

Hodiak, before hopping another plane for New York, promised to visit them at Walter Reed if his schedule permits.

The current Red Feather drive seeks to raise close to $54,000 for the USO. Installations are being reactivated across the country because of the peacetime draft.

Council Gets County Taxi Control Bill

Montgomery County Commissioners moved yesterday to knock the props out from under legal objections to the controversial county taxicab ordinance.

Meeting in Rockville, the commissioners instructed Public Utilities Agent Albert E. Conradis to urge approval by the State Legislative Council of a proposed amendment to the State Motor Vehicle Act.

The bill, to be studied by the Legislative Council today, would amend the motor vehicle law so that "confusion" surrounding the commissioners' power to regulate taxicabs would be eliminated. If approved today, the bill would be submitted to the January session of the General Assembly.

A contention by Robert H. Swisher, Takoma Park cab operator, that the county taxi ordinance conflicts with the State Motor Vehicle Act and, hence, is unconstitutional, was upheld by Montgomery County Circuit Court.

A final decree on the Swisher suit is pending, however. Conradis told the commissioner that enactment of the proposed bill by the Legislature would clarify existing laws and give them clear authority to regulate county cabs.

He is the legislation was drawn up by Dr. Horace E. Flack, secretary of the Legislative Council. He also quoted Dr. Flack as saying that if the County Circuit Court opinion were appealed, there would be "a fair chance" of it being reversed.

Because the next regular meeting day is November 2, Election Day, the commissioners agreed to postpone the meeting until November 4.

School Survey Report Set Today In Prince Georges

Report on a year-long survey of Prince Georges County, Md., schools will be made at a meeting of the county League of Women Voters at 8 p. m. today at the new agriculture building, University of Maryland.

The league and the County Council of the P-TA sponsored the study of educational needs and the methods of financing. Dr. Clarence E. Newell, professor of educational administration at the university, was consultant of the group.

A 52-page report has been prepared and will be presented at the meeting tonight, which is open to the public, by a panel consisting of Dr. Newell, Dr. Keith Harder, chairman of the advisory council to the board of education Mrs. Alex Weinstein and Mrs. Simon Epstein, chairman of the education committee of the League of Women Voters. Thomas S. Gwynn, supervisor of construction for the county schools, will be a guest.

School Building Needs, Woodside Park Topic

Richard E. Carpenter, Montgomery County assistant superintendent in charge of school property, will discuss the county's school building needs at 8 p.m. today at a meeting of the Woodside Park Civic Association.

The association will met at Grace Church Parish Hall, Georgia ave. and Grace Church rd., Silver Spring.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

LIKE A GOOD REPORTER, Dan Parker of the New York Mirror asked questions and got them answered, and his inquisitiveness added up to a revealing interview with Bucky Harris. It's the first telling of the Harris side of the story of his firing by the New York Yankees.

POVICH

The $20,000 severance pay the Yankees gave him along with his release had been described as hush money, particularly when, for 10 days, Harris clammed up and would make no comment on his discharge. But even Harris melted when published statements he believed inspired by the Yankees' front office accused him of being "too soft" with his ball players.

"The right story hasn't been told yet, but I'm going to give it now," Harris told Parker. "I've decided that my silence is making me a goat in this matter."

And so he unloaded to Parker. "My troubles with the Yankee organization started a few days after Larry MacPhail sold out his stock . . . when George Weiss was made the general manager, one of his first acts was to move me out of the private office MacPhail had provided for me, and put me in a big office with a lot of stenographers. Right then and there I smell a rat . . . maybe I was in somebody's way."

THAT HARRIS HAD front-office ambitions was well known to Weiss. MacPhail hired him originally as a front-office man before persuading Bucky to take over the management of the Yankees in 1947 after Joe McCarthy, Bill Dickey and Johnny Neun were released in succession during the hectic 1946 season.

Harris wanted no more of what he called "that monkey suit," but he took the managerial job as a favor to MacPhail, who brought him out of the minors. It helped to still the criticism of MacPhail, who had been firing managers with a heavy hand. There was an understanding between them that Harris would be moved up in the organization after a year or two as field manager.

Meanwhile, before he actually signed a managerial contract with the Yankees, Harris was offered the general manager's job at Detroit—long acclaimed as the best job in baseball. "General managers at Detroit get $40,000 a year and never get fired," said Harris two years ago, "and I'd love that job, but I owe it to MacPhail to stick with him, even at less money. That's my decision."

HE WAS HEARING, of course, ever since last mid-season that he was going to be edged out as manager of the Yankees. He didn't know why, he said, "but where there's so much smoke there's apt to be some firing." Three days before the end of the season he told this reporter "it looks like I'm out, but they haven't told me a thing. Maybe I can still win the pennant and save my job. But that's a heluva basis to have it on."

He told Parker he couldn't quite believe they would fire him, even as late as two days before the season ended. "Weiss called me up in Boston after we lost the game that put us out of the running the day before the season ended, and offered his sympathy. 'Tough luck, Stanley' he said. 'I'm sorry you didn't make it.' George sounded sincere, and I was reassured, even after he asked me to get together with him and Dan Topping after the season closed.

"But when I arrived at the Yankee offices for a conference that Monday afternoon, I could read in their faces that they had unpleasant news for me . . . there was an awkward silence until Weiss said, 'Mr. Topping, as owner of the club I think it's up to you to tell Bucky.' Dan then said: 'Bucky we are going to terminate your contract.'

"Why?" I asked. "There was another embarrassed silence which Dan broke by saying to Weiss: 'You're the baseball man. It's up to you to tell him.' Weiss said, 'Bucky I warned you last spring that this was a ball club that called for stern measures.'"

That was the crack Harris didn't like—the accusation that he was too soft. He told Weiss that the players who were troublesome were those who had come out of Yankees' farm system, products of Weiss' supervision. A few day later Harris was to read in the papers that he didn't lead the Yankee team—that he just drifted along with it. But until then he was willing to take the rap, plus $20,000 severance pay, and withdraw silently.

But now he was telling Parker that he didn't accept any hush money; that he felt himself released from any further silence, in justice to himself. He said he had no other job as yet but he could have added "Bucky Harris has been bounced out of baseball jobs before this and has always landed on his feet."

Pick-The-Winners Lineup This Week

DUKE VS. GEORGIA TECH, North Carolina vs. Tennessee, Southern Methodist vs. Texas, California vs. Southern California.

Those are some of the tough ones to select this week in The Washington Post's Pick-The-Winners contest.

Bear in mind that this is a contest of skill, designed to reward those who know their teams. Follow the accounts of the teams each week and make your selections accordingly.

The winner of each weekly contest will receive two (2) tickets to the Army-Navy game in Philadelphia, November 27, and an all-expenses paid trip to the big game for two persons.

The person submitting the most accurate entry each week also will receive four (4) tickets to a major college or professional game in this area. This game will be selected by The Washington Post.

The contest each week will include 20 of the major college games. Each contestant will select the winner (or tie) of each of these games.

A twenty-first (21st) game is listed on which "The Probable Score" will be given by each contestant.

Terps Have Eye on Orange Bowl

They Have to Make Impression Friday

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

Maryland plays in the Orange Bowl Friday night and if the Terrapins make a good impression it's entirely possible they'll be called back for a return engagement New Year's Day.

Included in the crowd of 40,000 who'll watch the Terps take on Miami U. will be members of the Orange Bowl selection committee, the gentlemen who extend the invitation to football teams to spend January 1 in Miami.

The Terrapins won't go into the Miami tiff total strangers. Miamians have already learned that the College Parkers have a fair-to-middlin' club. Miami newspapermen and the entire Miami U. football team saw the Terp-Duke game here two weeks ago and all were impressed.

"The better team lost," wrote Luther Evans of the Miami Herald and John McMullen of the Miami Daily News, after watching Duke squeeze out a 13-12 decision. Coach Andy Gustafson and his Miami footballers agreed.

It's no secret that Maryland would be receptive to a post-season offer. The Terps played in the Jacksonville 'Gator Bowl last January and earned $30,000 and a 20-20 tie with Georgia for their New Year's Day labors.

Maryland officials welcomed the addition of the $30,000 to their athletic coffers and also liked the prestige its football team received in its first postseason venture. An invitation to play in a major bowl this year wouldn't be frowned upon.

There are several minor obstacles standing in the path of an

Officials Will Be Watching at Miami

Orange Bowl invitation for the Terps. First, and at present the most important, Coach Jim Tatum's split-T disciples must whip Miami decisively.

If the Terps can dazzle Miami U. and the crowd, they'll be remembered when the time comes for picking Orange Bowl teams. But no matter how scintillating their performance may be Friday, it will be forgotten unless the Terps make a creditable showing against South Carolina, Vanderbilt, North Carolina and West Virginia, whom they play after Miami.

Georgia, with practically the same team which played Maryland to a 20-20 standoff in January, put on a spectacular air show in

'The Split T Will Drive You Nuts'

Miami, Fla., Oct. 26 (AP).—The University of Miami Hurricanes scrimmage tomorrow in preparation for their homecoming game with Maryland Friday night—their first scrimmage since the season opened.

"That Maryland split T attack will drive you nuts," Coach Andy Gustafson told his squad during a lengthy drill yesterday.

He promised a long, hard workout instead of tapering off tomorrow.

Michigan, Irish Still 1-2 in Poll

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—With Michigan and Notre Dame running 1-2 among the Nation's gridiron leaders for the second straight year, the other all-victorious outfits probably are wondering what they have to do to convince the experts that their records are just as good.

Mighty Michigan strengthened its position as top team in the weekly poll of the Associated Press today after hurdling Minnesota, 27-14, Saturday for its nineteenth straight triumph and fifth this season.

Notre Dame was returned to second place by the consensus, which also lined up the next five clubs i the exact positions they held a week ago, although all sport spotless records.

Michigan landed the No. 1 spot on 117 of the 206 ballots cast, compared with 74 out of a possible 148 first place votes last week. North Carolina received 46 votes for third place, an increase of 14, but remained in third place behind Notre Dame, which drew only 19.

California, which blanked Washington 21-0 for its sixth straight victory, collected 13 first-place votes but couldn't climb out of the No. 4 spot.

And Army had to be satisfied with its fifth place rating, although the Cadets stopped hitherto unbeaten Cornell 27-6 for their fifth in a row.

The only team to drop out of the top ten was Penn State, which slumped to twelfth after being tied by Michigan State, 14-14. Nevada climbed into tenth place on its 65-14 walloping of Tulsa.

Flyers Rout Lions, 7-2, on Late Surge

After playing even for two periods with the fanciest playmakers to appear in Uline Arena this year, the Washington Lions went limp as the St. Louis Flyers beat a five-goal tatoo in the last period to win 7-2 before 2580 onlookers.

The victory put the smooth-skating Flyers into the Western Division lead.

Win Mousseau, a doubtful starter for the Lions' was the only bright note in a dismal evening for the local club. Mousseau, his misconduct suspension lifted, kept the Lions in the game for the first 40 minutes with two sparkling goals in the first period.

Mousseau for the Lions and Steve Black for the visitors divided the first four goals between them. Mousseau got in first at 3:10 of the first period. Black scored his first goal at 14:26, and six seconds later Mousseau had taken the face off pass from Ken Schultz and put in a long one. Black tied it up at 15:36.

The second period saw Pat Wilson temporarily kayoed after a collision with Eddie Olson and Johnny Raynak slashed over the eye by Harry Dick, who was booted out for five minutes for it. Neither team could work up a scoring attack in this period.

Beyer Proves A-1 Student Can Be A-1 Football Player

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Georgetown's Brooke (Tony) Beyer offers proof that it's possible for a football player to be a student—and a football player.

Beyer, one of the five seniors on the Hoya squad, is able to work out with the team only twice a week. His premedical course keeps him in the classroom the other days. But it doesn't keep him from being one of Georgetown's best defensive backs.

Against Fordham last week, Beyer seemed completely unencumbered when he intercepted a Ram pass and dashed 71 yards for a touchdown.

Those bruising tackles Beyer has been making all season seem out of character for an embryo doctor and A-1 student. In the difficult premed course, though, Beyer has an average of 87 in such studies as physiology, psychology, embryology and ethics.

At Georgetown Prep, where the Chevy Chase lad was selected on the first All-Prep team, Beyer was graduated at the head of his class with a 97 average.

Bill Rach, Hoya tub-thumper, tried to embellish the Beyer tale by relating that Tony's hobby is reading Shakespeare. Beyer promptly denied it. Rach went wrong when he saw Beyer studiously poring over a Shakespeare play on the trip to Tulsa.

Beyer explained, "Why, I had to —we were having a test when we got home." So Beyer's human enough although some of the Hoya opponents may protest that those vicious tackles of his seem inhuman.

Tony and his Hoya teammates next will be seen in action here Friday night against Denver University at Griffith Stadium. From the looks of Denver's record, which includes a lone victory and five successive defeats, it appears that the Hoyas have an excellent chance of winning their third game in five outings.

The boys from Colorado's mile-high city arrive in town this afternoon and plan to start immediate preparations aimed toward giving Georgetown an unpleasant surprise.

Flowe Scores Twice

Danny Flowe reeled off two 50-yard touchdown runs as Landon's 120-pound footballers whipped Georgetown Prep, 24-7, yesterday at Garrett Park.

Governor Makes Him a Colonel

Scrub Broncho McGugan Is Oklahoma 'Hero for a Day'

Norman, Okla., Oct. 26 (U.P.)—Boyd (Broncho) McGugan of the University of Oklahoma's football team was a fifth-string center last week and he'll probably be a fifth-string center next week.

But in between came Broncho's day of glory.

The whole State of Oklahoma decided to honor those scrubs who take the weekly scrimmage battering from the varsity on Tuesday and Wednesday, and then sit on the bench all Saturday afternoon.

The big occasion came during the Oklahoma-Kansas State game. Oklahoma was leading by four touchdowns when Coach Bud Wilkinson finally tapped Broncho on the shoulder and told him to get in there and fight.

Spurning the streamlined plastic helmets issued by the property man, Broncho strapped on an old-fashioned, almost ludicrous headgear and trotted onto the field. The loudspeaker announced, "McGugan replacing Dowell at center . . . McGugan acting captain for Oklahoma."

The crowd of 20,000 cheered. Broncho played for eight minutes without scoring a touchdown, without making a vital tackle, without kicking an extra point. But when he left the field the crowd cheered again.

Then Gov. Roy J. Turner presented Broncho with an honorary Colonel's commission during a luncheon yesterday.

Reeves Pistol Leader; Cook 2d With Rifle

Quantico, Va., Oct. 26.—Pistol-shooter Harry Reeves, Detroit police sergeant, checked in today with a second round of 871, taking over the lead at the end of two days' shooting in the National Rifle and Pistol championships.

Reeves' total score of 1744 makes him a strong favorite to regain the title he lost last year.

The rifle marksmen opened competition today and completed four of their eight matches with Defending Champion G. Wayne Moore, Washington, Pa., leading little Arthur Cook, 20-year-old Olympic champion and a U. of Maryland student, by a point, 1556-1555.

A terrific wind hampered the riflemen. Moore, already 44 points off a possible 1600, last year dropped only six points out of a possible 3200.

After his third straight rifle championship, Moore tomorrow will have to hold off Cook; E. D. Bench, Hubbard Woods, Ill., 1554; Earl Saunders, Louisville, Ky., 1553, and Robert Perkins, Fresno, Calif., 1550. Perkins, Pacific Coast champion, hasn't lost a tournament since being runner-up to Moore in the Nationals last year.

Reeves holds a 6-point lead over Army Tech. Sergt Heulet Benner, Fort Knox, Ky. It was Benner who upset him last year, ending his 7-year reign. Tomorrow the boys' finish up the last third of their program with .45-caliber pistols and Reeves is considered the best .45-shooter in the country.

Still in contention are Marine Capt. Thurman Barrier of Washington, who has 1735—9 points behind the leader—and Marine Lieut. Col. Walter Walsh with 1733.

Fighter Martin On Danger List

Providence, R. I., Oct. 26 (AP). Danny Martin, 22-year-old Newark middleweight boxer, was on the danger list at the Rhode Island hospital today as a result of head injuries he received in a bout with Tommy Bell, Youngstown, Ohio, here last night.

The hospital reported this morning that Martin was responding to treatment and his condition was good. He has regained consciousness.

Arcel Thinks He's Found His Fighter

By Bill Ahlberg
Post Reporter

RAY ARCEL is happy again.

He's found someone who can fight.

Not that he hasn't had his share of the big names in the past. He's worked with guys like Jackie "Kid" Berg, Tony Zale, Joe Palooka of comic fame and 12 assorted gentlemen who have fought Joe Louis. But he says his latest is going to be his best.

The fighter he refers to is 28-year-old Eric Boon, former welterweight and lightweight champion of Great Britain and Europe.

Eric is taking on a big job here at Uline's Arena Thursday night in his first American fight. He meets Beau Jack, former world's lightweight champion.

But Arcel, who is one of the country's top fight handlers and managers, isn't worried. For that matter, Eric isn't, either.

ARCEL SAYS Eric is ready for this one. And he should know.

"Eric is one of the few European fighters who can punch, and he's fast," says Ray, "and we'll find out Thursday night whether he's going to be the fighter I think he is or not. He's had over 200 fights and has won over half of them by knockouts."

Ray's praise for his fighter is a far cry from the first reports Arcel received about him.

It was in London. Arcel was in Europe looking over the fighters. He hadn't found anyone who ven looked good. Kid Berg, Ray's old fighter, called him up one night and asked him to go to the fights with him. From here on it's Arcel talking:

"I tagged along, having nothing better to do. I didn't even have any idea who was fighting.

"We get to the arena and everyone is talking about some Frenchman named Omar Kouidri, who will murder a guy named Eric Boon. All around me people are saying Boon is washed up, through after a pretty good career.

"THE FIGHT starts. Eric comes out, spars a little and WHAM!! he tags Kouidri. The Frenchman is staggered but he hangs on and finishes the round. I begin to ask myself what is this. Here's a guy, a 2½-to-1 underdog, smacking the favorite all over the ring.

"They come out for the second round, Eric hits him only once across the mouth and cheek. It looked like he'd used an axe. The blow opened Kouldri's cheek about three inches. They stopped the fight and awarded Eric a TKO.

"Right then and there I decided this was my fighter. This guy could punch. And so here we are."

This is Eric's first fight in this country. After Ray took over, Eric lost a 10-round decision to Robert Villemain, last April in London.

HE LOST his last fight, too. It was up in Canada last August against Johnny Greco, who was awarded a TKO after Eric suffered a cut cheek.

But Ray blames the food his boy had to get along on for those two.

His fighter has eaten good ever since, so there's no excuses this time, "Thursday's night it's up to him."

Eric knows it is, too. Yesterday at a luncheon he got up to make a little speech. He glared over at Beau Jack and said "I think the better man is going to win."

You didn't have to do much guessing to know who he had in mind.

6 Clubs Have Players on Big League AP All-Stars

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Five players from the American and five from the National make up the 1948 major league all-star team as selected for the Associated Press by 220 baseball experts throughout the Nation.

Only six of the 16 big league clubs, three in each league, are represented in the third annual all-star aggregation.

The World Champion Cleveland Indians won two berths as did the National League Champion Braves.

Bosox Have Two

The Boston Red Sox and St. Louis Cardinals, runners-up in their respective circuits, also placed two representatives each. One man from the New York Yankees and one from the New York Giants complete the team.

Of the ten men selected, no fewer than six are holdovers from the 1947 all-star team. They consist of the entire infield of Johnny Mize, Joe Gordon, Bob Elliott and Lou Boudreau; Ted Williams and Joe DiMaggio, who compose two-thirds of the outfield. Williams, slugging outfielder of the Red Sox, is the only performer to be elected to all three teams starting in 1946.

No player was a unanimous choice. Stan Musial, the National League's batting king, and Williams, the champion stickman of the American League, were tied for the most votes. Each drew 212 of the 220 ballots cast.

All Williams' Votes were for left field. Musial's were scattered over three positions. The Cardinal's great flychaser, who led his loop in batting, runs scored, hits, runs batted in, doubles and triples, drew 195 votes for right field, five for center and 12 for first base. The 27-year-old pride of Donora, Pa., won a place on the '46 all-star team at first, but lost out last year in the outfield to Ralph Kiner of Pittsburgh.

DiMaggio, sparkplug of the Yankees, won the centerfield post hands down with 210 votes, third highest total among the 63 vote-getters. DiMag, with Williams and Musial, make up one of the greatest hitting outfields ever put together on an all-star team. They hit 102 home runs and drove in 415 runs last season.

3 Odds-On Choices Fail To Get Home

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 26.—Favorite players, known as "chalk eaters" on the back stretch, went down swinging on this beautiful Indian summer day. Three times they installed an odds-on public choice and as many times they bit the dust.

The failure of these lock bets ran right into the feature race—the Patuxent Purse. In this test E. A. Nicodemus' Laran, away from the winners' circle since last spring, came from behind to hand a 2½-length defeat on Christiana Stable's Alexis, carrying most of the mutuel play.

Miss Margie Fisher's Shivaree, a recent winner on an off track, was third in the field of eight, going a mile and sixteenth over a fast track and under a bright sun that brought out in bold relief the multi-colored trees along the back stretch.

Laran, making his third start here, returned a $12.80 mutuel and was clocked in 1:46 1/5 for the route while under the handling of Apprentice Jockey Willie Gilbert.

Kirk's Judgment Questioned

Regulars in the crowd questioned the judgment of Jockey Carson Kirk who rode Alexis. The 6-year-old was sent out to try to race into the ground Shivaree, a speedier horse. Alexis succeeded in that task but his effort sapped him and when Laran charged through on the inside it was all over for the favorite backers.

Greentree Stable's One Hitter, believed to have the fourth race at his mercy, also was beaten and finished second. Crispin Ogilebay's Why The Rush was the "big hurry" horse and lasted while tiring through the stretch. However, Apprentice Benny Civitello was aboard One Hitter after riding two winners in a row.

Civitello rode as if he were looking for trouble. He got it. He was forced to take up slightly along the backstretch, came to the inside in the stretch, took up and then went to the outside. In the closing drive Why The Rush, which had a 10-length lead at one interval, lasted to score by a neck margin. William Hitt's Galaman was third.

Why The Rush, ridden by R. J. Martin, paid $10.60 and was clocked in 1:46 4/5 for the mile and a sixteenth.

In the third race, Walter M. Jeffords' Pibroch was played and replayed but couldn't even get into the money circle, ending up in fourth position.

Civitello in Double

The winner turned up in M. Bishop's Grain Market, paying $14.40. Civitello rode this winner and made no mistakes. Foxcatcher Farm's Rose Flake was second with J. V. Scelzi's Hampshire Boy third.

The program saw the scratching of two sore horses after they had appeared on the track. F. Corvi's Windswept was withdrawn from the second race and H. Dickman's Waterclock was taken out of the seventh event. The betting money was refunded in both cases.

The daily double on the 6 and 4 combination paid $428.60 with bost of the big money being applied by B. S. Campbell's Quick Party, the $81.60 winner of the first race. M. Gilbert's Lady Airy took the second event at $16.60 under the handling of the aforementioned Civitello.

Kirk had a rough day. In addition to being beaten with Alexis, he also took a drubbing on Mrs. H. J. Mohr's Why Cry, the favorite in the seventh race. When he was announced as the rider of Spikery in the eighth, his name was booed loudly.

NFL Statistics

Dan Sandifer Second in Kick Returns

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 26 (AP).—Veteran pro gridders still dominate National Football League statistics today but a few newcomers threaten to crash the spotlight in their specialties.

Redskin Rookie Dan Sandifer, second in the kickoff return department behind Bruce Smith of Green Bay, owns the longest single kickoff return—a 96-yard runback of a Packer boot last Sunday for a touchdown. Smith has returned 10 kicks for 241 yards, Sandifer 6 for 174.

Sandifer also caught the longest pass, an 86-yard heave from Slingin' Sammy Baugh, that was good for 6 Washington points.

Charlie Trippi, University of Georgia All-American now denting NFL lines for the Chicago Cardinals, vaulted into second place in the ground-gaining department. The hard-running Trippi joined the pro ranks only last year.

Green Bay's Tony Canadeo continues to set the pace among ground gainers with 381 yards in 70 attempts, an average of 5.4 yards per plunge. Trippi, in 47 carries, has gained 320 yards for 6.8 average.

Steve Van Buren, the Philadelphia Eagles' top runner and last year's ground-gaining champion, is in fourth place (264 in 86 tries), behind Elmer Angsman of the Cardinals (295 in 52).

Tom Fears, a rookie end from Los Angeles, has snared 23 aerials for 289 yards to lead the pass receivers. Last week's leader, Hal Crisler of Washington, slipped to third behind Clyde Goodnight of Green Bay. Goodnight snared 20 heaves, Crisler only 18.

THE EAGLES' T-formation master, Tommy Thompson, bolstered his passing leadership despite a shoulder injury that sidelined him for most of Sunday's game with the Chicago Bears.

But another newcomer, Los Angeles' Jim Hardy, bounded into second place over such famed aerial artists as Washington's Sammy Baugh and the Bears' Sid Luckman.

Thompson has tossed 92 passes, completed 53 for 666 yards—eight heaves going for touchdowns and only three into enemy hands—for a 57.6 average. Hardy has connected 40 of 81 times, gaining 495 yards and connecting for four TD's.

Mal Kutner, the glue-fingered Cardinal who's snared seven touchdown passes, leads the scorers with 48 points. The Cards' Pat Harder is second with 35 points.

Friday Terps' Big Night

thrashing Miami, 42-21, last Friday night. If both the Bulldogs and Terrapins come through the rest of their schedules in good shape, a playoff of the Maryland—Georgia 'Gator Bowl tie wouldn't be a bad attraction for the 1949 Orange Bowl game.

IN SHORT—Miami has won two and dropped two this season, whipping Rollins and Detroit and losing to Villanova and Georgia . . . The Miami offense is centered on the passing arm of Sophomore Quarterback Jack Del Bell whose favorite receiver is End Ralph Fieler a 6-foot 6-inch junior . . . The Terrapins leave Thursday morning via chartered plane in quest of their fifth victory in six starts . . .

Bartell Out as Pilot At Kansas City

Kansas City, Oct. 26 (AP).—General Manager Lee McPhail of the Kansas City Blues entry in the American Association announced today that the contract of Dick Bartell, 1948 manager, would not be renewed.

At Almeda, Calif., Bartell told newsmen he "hadn't heard a word" from the club.

"It's funny they wouldn't let me know by mail or telegraph that I was fired before announcing it to the press," Bartell commented.

Arthur Urban's 75 Wins Low Gross Cup

Arthur Urban of the D. J. Dunnigan Co. shot four birdies and a 75 on a windy Indian Spring Country Club course yesterday to win the Low Gross Cup in the Real Estate-Building Loan Golf League tournament.

Albert J. Miles, of the District Title Insurance Co., won the Low Net Cup with an 84, 14—70.

Mrs. Maksim Wins

Mrs. George Maksim shot 106-25-81 yesterday to win the ladies day medal play with handicap tournament at Manor Golf and Country Club. Second low net went to Mrs. J. H. Sullivan with 107-24-83.

Nevada's Heath Far Out in Front

New York, Oct. 26 (U.P.).—Despite George Washington's 47-0 shellacking by Maryland last Saturday, Andy Davis, the Colonial's one-man attack, managed to stay seventh among the nation's leaders in total offense this week.

However, the freshman fullback from Washington, D. C., is in no danger of taking the lead from Nevada's Stan Heath.

With passing accounting for all but 5 yards, Heath has gained 1313 yards. He's already within striking distance of the collegiate passing record.

Davey O'Brien of Texas Christian set the existing mark of 1457 yards for the 1938 season, and that has been equaled only once, by Bud Schwenk of Washington U. of St. Louis in 1941.

The National Collegiate Athletic Bureau statistics, released yesterday, give Heath a total of 1318 yards passing, an average of over 263 yards per game. He has never gone under 140 this year, and goes up against Oklahoma City at Reno Saturday.

Davis has handled the ball 155 times in six games, and has accounted for 671 yards by passing and running. He's nineteenth among the Nation's passers with 32 completions in 71 attempts for 453 yards and three touchdowns.

Besides Davis, there are several Southern Conference-area stars who figure prominently in the statistics.

In total offense, there's North Carolina's Choo Choo Charley Justice, fourth with 857 yards in five games. Justice is also third among the punters with a 43-yard average.

Johnny Papit, University of Virginia halfback, is second in rushing, due mostly to his 336 yards gained on the ground against Washington and Lee and V.M.I. on the past two Saturdays. Papit has gained 581 yards to put him behind only Fred Wendt of Texas Mines, with 852 yards.

Bobby Thomason of V.M.I., and Mike Boyda of Washington and Lee rank third and sixth among the Nation's passers. Red O'Quinn of Wake Forest and Art Weiner of North Carolina are second and fifth in pass receiving.

Maryland is prominent in team statistics, ranking sixth in total offense and rushing offense and fifth in passing defense. The Terps have averaged 388.8 yards in total offense in six games. Navy is fifth in passing offense.

The 10 leaders in each department:

TOTAL OFFENSE (gains rushing and passing)—Hath, Nevada, 1313 yards in 146 plays; Berry, Texas Christian, 864 in 135; Wendt, Texas Mines, 859 in 84; Justice, North Carolina, 857 in 136; Faunce, Minnesota, 693 in 120; Finks, Tulsa, 678 in 140; Davis, George Washington, 671 in 135; Ceconi, Pittsburgh, 666 in 124; Olix, Miami (Ohio), 662 in 79; Rauch, Georgia, 657 in 104.

RUSHING OFFENSE—Wendt, Texas Mines, 832 yards in 78 carries; Papit, Virginia, 581 in 64; Jensen, California, 534 in 88; Stephenson, Army, 546 in 89; Thomas, Oklahoma, 535 in 77; C. Scott, Arkansas, 500 in 63; Jones, Wyoming, 488 in 63; Stuart, Army, 480 in 77; Berry, Texas Christian, 460 in 111; Van Noy, Utah State, 440 in 77.

PASSING OFFENSE (ranked on total completions)—Heath, Nevada, 85; Finks, Tulsa, 55; Thomason, Virginia Military, 53; Walthall, West Virginia, 47; Van Brocklin, Oregon, 45; Boyda, Washington and Lee, 45; Southard, Georgia Tech, 44; Lambeth, Davidson, 39; Rauch, Georgia, 39; Nagel, UCLA, 37.

Glass Eye Found; Official Denies Using One-Eyed Umpires

Arkansas City, Kans., Oct. 26 (AP).—Found on a football field here: one glass eye.

Amos Curry, athletic director of Arkansas City schools, reported the find today, and quickly emphasized two things:

1. No one-eyed officials have been employed in recent games.

2. No school to his knowledge has fielded a team having a player with artificial eyes.

Johnny Neun Signs With Yanks Again

New York, Oct. 26 (AP).—Johnny Neun, former major league first baseman and manager in both the majors and minors, returned to the New York Yankees today as a player contact man with the organization he served from 1932 through 1946.

In announcing the rehiring of Neun, who has managed both the Yankees and the Cincinnati Reds, the New York club said he also would do some "personalized scouting" within the major leagues.

A Yankee coach in 1944, 1945 and 1946, Neun stepped into the managerial post late in the 1946 season to replace Bill Dickey, who had taken over from Joe McCarthy only a short time earlier.

He went to the Reds as Manager in 1947, being succeeded with the Yankees by Bucky Harris, but was replaced by Bucky Walters early in the 1948 season.

Women Wrestle Here Tonight

Mildred Burke, the grand dame of the female grunters, and Elvira Snodgrass take over the feature tonight at Turner's Arena.

Claudio Villar and Benny Bortnick, the straight men in the Turner extravaganzas, are both trying to shy away from arbitrating the match. The he-men will be represented in bouts between Gino Garibaldi and Dutch Schweigert, Wilbur Nead and Jesse James, Ivan Kamaroff and Fred Carone, Stu Smith and John Gallagher.

McMaster Heads Mid-Atlantic PGA

The Middle Atlantic P. G. A. re-elected Carroll McMaster of the Woodholme Club in Baltimore as its president for the coming year. Bill Hardy of the Chevy Chase Club was elected vice president for the Washington area; Harold Oatman and Johnny Bass were vice presidents for Norfolk and Baltimore. John Flattery was elected secretary-treasurer.

Morgan Beatty, jr., scored three touchdowns as Landon's 100-pound football team downed Sidwell Friends, 24-12, yesterday at Friends.

Tired G. W. Tackles Another Ambitious Foe in Lafayette

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

There's no rest this Saturday for the bruised and weary George Washington football team, shut out in successive weeks by Kansas and Maryland.

Next on G.W.'s seemingly "breatherless" schedule is Lafayette, which next to Army and Maryland, is the most offensive team in the East.

Deep in reserves to the extent of using the two-team system, the Lafayette Leopards are enjoying their most successful season since their undefeated 1940 campaign. They've lost only one game in five, that one to mighty Army, 54-7.

Lafayette has swamped Fordham, 53-14, Washington and Jefferson, 56-15, and Muhlenberg, 46-13. Slowed by rain and a muddy field last Saturday, the Leopards were held to a 19-7 victory by Bucknell.

This is the first meeting of the schools in 20 years. The only other time they met Lafayette smeared the Colonials, 28-0.

There's something of a parallel in their 1948 renewal of acquaintances. Whereas this year's G. W. team has been dubbed the "Fightin' Fifteen" because of the sparseness of material, H. Watson (Maud) Crum, coach of the 1928 Colonials, uniformed only 20 men for the Lafayette game. Lafayette was the East's scoringest team 20 years ago.

This year's Lafayette edition has averaged better than 375 yards per game, and is eighth in the Nation in rushing with 270 yards per game.

Frank Downing, the East's tenth ranking passer last year, is the field general of the Leopards. He's the quarterback of the T attack, the seventh straight such attack to be faced by G. W.

With such stellar ball-toters as Fullback Gordon Fleming, Dan Kovacs and Watt Germusa to spark the offense, Downing hasn't had to resort much to passing this season. However, he did unlimber his arm against Muhlenberg to the extent of tossing three touchdown passes.

WHY EXECUTIVES SMOKE WEBSTERS

There's a good reason why so many executives smoke Websters—and why Webster outsells any other brand in the U. S. A. priced at 15c and up.

That reason is uniformity. Only by giving genuine pleasure consistently to many smokers could Webster have attained its present position of leadership.

You have a choice of five Websters, differing in size, shape and price. But all five are exactly alike in quality, workmanship, and blend. Always, the filler is flavorful 100% Long Havana; the binder is top-grade Broadleaf; and the wrapper is finest Connecticut Shadegrown. It's a blend you can depend on for smoothness and fine flavor.

For smoking that's uniformly a rich delight, cigar after cigar, ask for Websters! At clubs, good hotels, and tobacco stands everywhere.

The Federal Diary

by Jerry Kluttz

Story of Blast Victim Shows Inadequacy of U. S. Worker Protection

Uncle Sam is generally recognized as an excellent and sympathetic boss. But perhaps you haven't heard the tragic story of Jules B. Counts, a graduate student at the University of Maryland who, at 33, is one of the Army's up-and-coming young scientists.

The story of this employe will tear your heart out. It should also gouge Government agencies and the Congress into action to prevent unnecessary suffering by other unfortunate employes.

Counts has worked for Army Ordnance for nine years. His salary as an associate chemist is $4900. He worked two years here and for the past several years he has been stationed at the Aberdeen, (Md.) Proving Grounds, where he specialized in explosives; a dangerous occupation.

During the past summer he was assigned to work on a new type of explosive—something that would save the lives of our fighting men in any future war. On August 5 he was alone in his laboratory conducting an experiment on the explosive. There was a terrible blast.

In the hospital, the young chemist was found to have had both hands blown off above the wrists, and severe head and chest cuts. He was given only a long chance to live. But Counts fooled his doctors and he's very much alive today at Walter Reed Hospital here—but he's very worried, too. He's concerned because in his helpless condition he hasn't the money to take care of his wife and 3-year-old daughter.

Oddly enough, the Government, which requires private employers to take care of their injured employes through a workman's compensation system, gives less protection to its civilian employes in such cases.

Up to now, Counts has been drawing his regular pay check by using his accumulated annual and sick leave. But that leave soon will be used up and the only income he'll have is a maximum of $116-a-month from Employes Compensation.

That's something, and it helps, but it isn't enough. Even with about $400-a-month, coming in from his regular salary, the Countses have had to sell their war bonds and they have spent just about all of their savings to pay for the many expenses connected with any such accident. The $116-a-month won't even pay the rent and feed his family in these days of high prices. It won't be enough to finance the visits of his wife and child here to keep up his morale—something any hospitalized person needs.

Immediately ahead of Counts is a long siege at Walter Reed. He had a second operation last week on his arms. Two more are in the offing. Then he'll be fitted with artificial hands and he'll be taught to use them at the hospital. That will require five additional months. Then must come a long period of convalescence—time to readjust himself to a new way of living.

To repeat, he can't do this on $116 a month and his savings are almost gone. Besides the routine expenses, he'll have to hire someone to work around the house, since his wife will have her hands full helping her husband to learn to help himself.

The Counts case underlines the gross discrimination and inadequacy of the civilian employe compensation program that was enacted in those peaceful and unhurried days of 1927, and which hasn't been changed since.

If Counts had been an officer in the Army, for example, he would be retired on total disability at three fourths of his base pay, or about $3600 a year, plus hospitallization and other benefits for the remainder of his life.

It the scientist had been working for a private business in this city, he also would be judged permanently disabled and he would be paid a minimum of about $200 a month. And any established business would help his family.

But as a civilian employe who was working on a project that's vital to our defense and security, Counts isn't even sure of being paid the $116 a month for the rest of his life from Employes Compensation. If he goes back to work, which he plans to do but which is problematical, his $116 must be whittled down under the law.

There's one hope—that the Government will take positive action to correct injustices to its injured civilian workers. We can all join hands in working for this worthy goal. Uncle Sam should:

1. Make a flat payment to Counts to help him and his family through this long period of readjustment. This could be accomplished through the passage by Congress of a private bill for the benefit of the scientist. But first, the Army should recommend it, and.

2. It should approve the Keating bill or something similar to it that would raise from $116 to $225 the maximum amount a month a disabled civilian employe could be paid.

Counts is facing the future with faith and hope in Uncle Sam to do right by him and his family. We shouldn't let him down. He has already been hurt enough.

He's confident that he'll be able to complete his work for his doctor's degree at the University of Maryland and that he'll be able to resume his scientific career one of these days. His 3-year-old girl is uppermost on his mind as he lies in his hospital bed. "The biggest tragedy to me," he says, "is the bringing up of my little girl in my condition."

Overnight Jury Acquits Dr. Brown Of Abortion

Delay in Verdict Is Attributed by Group Foreman to One-Man Holdout

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Dr. Schley Brown, 47, was acquitted by a District Court jury yesterday of performing an abortion on a 24-year-old unmarried typist here.

The graying physician smiled when the verdict was delivered before Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut. Dr. Brown waited patiently, seated on a window seat in the court corridor, while the jury deliberated all Monday afternoon and evening and from 10 a. m. yesterday morning until the verdict was returned at 11:30 a. m.

According to Miss Shelley B. Covington, retired Government employe of 2719 Georgia ave. nw., who was elected jury foreman, the lengthy deliberations were due to one member.

"We were 11 to 1 for acquittal all night. I had to get down on my hands and knees to convince one man that Dr. Brown was innocent," she said.

The trial heard charges by the complaining witness, Miss Lee Jeanette LoFaro of 407 Randolph st nw. She testified that Dr. Brown performed the abortion for her last September at his office, 237 Rhode Island ave. nw., for $300.

She then charged that Dr. Brown paid her back $300 to "get out of town" when she was to testify early this year and that through her attorney, Ellis Klein, of the Evans Building, Brown paid her $771 in addition.

Klein flatly denied the statements about him. Dr. Brown never took the witness stand in his own defense.

Twice previously, Dr. Brown was tried for allegedly performing abortions on other women. In both cases, the jury was unable to agree.

On one other occasion, Brown was charged with abortion, but the United States Attorney nolled prossed the case when the witness declined to prosecute.

Two District Employes Quit For More Pay

Insufficient salary was cited by two District employes yesterday in resigning to take better-paying positions.

The resignations were submitted by Wilbur W. Sacra, jr., assistant corporation counsel, who left a $2600 District post to accept a $4479 a year position on the legal staff of the Federal Trade Commission, and Dr. Joe M. Van Hoy, assistant surgeon at Glenn Dale Sanatorium who will go into private practice.

Sacra, who has been on the city's legal staff since March, left a $4150 a year post with the Federal Government then, in order to obtain "very varied and valuable legal experience" in the low-salaried District post.

His department chief, Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, said the filling of the position, as well as vacancies on his clerical staff, would be difficult, not only because of the low pay, but also the pressure of work handled.

He complained that some Federal agencies offer at least grade P-6 ($7100 a year) for attorneys who enter court pleading, while 17 of the 26 assistant corporation counsels are paid in grade P-1 to P-5, ranging from $2600 to $5900.

As for clerical aid, he said he has three vacancies now for CAF-4 clerk-typists but the Commissioner's economy mandate on budget estimates for 1950 directed that no additional personnel be requested.

Dr. Van Hoy, the Glenn Dale resignee, said he felt the $4800 a year salary was inadequate, and criticized the lack of satisfactory living quarters on the grounds. He was compelled, to make long trips daily from his home in Arlington, he said. He will enter private practice in Charlotte, N. C.

Dr. Daniel L. Finucane, Glenn Dale superintendent, said the resignation brought the total vacancies on the medical staff to 11.

Radio Speeds Solution of Amnesia Case

By John London
Post Reporter

Because Mrs. Jeanette Behrmann happens to be one of those women who finds housework dull, an amnesia victim was identified here yesterday. He turned out to be a cousin of hers by marriage.

Mrs. Behrmann was cleaning windows in her home, 8900 2d ave., Silver Spring—"a very dull job so I turned on the radio."

During the broadcast over radio station WWDC, names and descriptions of missing persons were reeled off—and suddenly Mrs. Behrmann's ears perked up to hear:

"There is at Gallinger Hospital an unidentified white man, about 40 years old . . . neatly dressed, who came to No. 1 station house about 2:15 this morning and stated that he believed his name was Sidney J. Left, but could not remember anything else."

Cousin By Marriage

Well, said Mrs. Behrmann to herself, it seems to me I have a cousin in New York married to a Sidney J. Left, and it seems to me he suffered a spell of amnesia some years ago.

So she phoned the Police Missing Persons Bureau, verified the name and description—"about 40 years old, dark hair, brown eyes, 5-feet-6 tall, 140 pounds, neatly dressed."

Wife Coming Here

Left's wife, Rhoda, was on her way to Washington last night for a reunion with her husband, relatives said. Left, a newspaper route man, of 601 West 152d st., New York City, and his wife have two young sons, according to relatives.

Gallinger authorities said Left still had not completely recovered his memory last night. Police said he had no identification on his person but a check revealed he had pawned a watch and ring in Washington, using his own name and a Boston address.

The Navy's decks are cleared today, ready for inspection by thousands of visitors who will be piped aboard ships and stations over the world on its 173d anniversary.

Celebration of Navy Day, in which some 20 installations in Greater Washington will participate, will feature "open houses" for the public and a variety of exhibits of the latest Naval developments.

Operation High School was launched here yesterday as a pre-H-hour glimpse of Navy life for teen-age boys and girls.

Girls Are 'Logged In'

At the Wave barracks in East Potomac Park, the first contingent of 20 girls from Washington high schools "logged in" at 1630 hours (4:30 p. m.). They were to be guests of the Navy for 24 hours, but their routine would conform strictly to that of members of the regular service.

That includes taps at 10:30 p. m. and reveille at 6 a. m.

At the Naval Receiving Station, Anacostia, 116 high school boys drew their bedding and proceeded without persuasion to the chow line They are to be shown the ropes in a schedule starting at 6:30 a. m.

Aside from observing the Navy way of doing business, the high school students will attend movies, recreation periods and a football game during their tour.

Air Shows Scheduled

The theme of America's gigantic sea-and-air defense will be carried around the globe in commemoration of October 27, 1775, when the Continental Congress provided six small frigates to protect the New World—the foundation of today's United States Navy.

In 67 ports in this country, the Hawaiian Islands and in England, more than 350 Navy ships will be open to the public. Navy and Naval Reserve planes will stage air shows in many major cities.

The destroyer Warrington, four landing ships and a patrol craft will visit Washington.

A three-day display of Navy radar, Marine Corps helicopters and a Navy "Phantom" jet-propelled plane will open this morning at the Washington Monument grounds, adjacent to the 14th st. nw. The helicopters will fly from Quantico twice each day. Experts will be on hand to explain operation of all equipment.

The Military Order of World Wars, together with several veterans and civic organizations, will accentuate the solemnity of the occasion in a memorial ceremony at John Paul Jones Monument at noon.

W. John Kenney, Undersecretary of the Navy will make the principal address at the annual Navy Day dinner, to be held at 8 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel, preceded by a reception at 7:30 p. m.

At Alexandria, Va., the Naval Ordnance Plant will combine Navy Day ceremonies with the commemoration of its founding 30 years ago.

The District of Columbia Council of the Navy League will honor a 17-year-old Los Angeles girl, Miss Ruth Oriani, for heroism in saving the life of a 2-year-old boy last year after he fell in an abandoned petroleum pit.

Her father served a 30-year hitch in the Navy and her grandfather was on the battleship Oregon in 1882. She will be presented a gold medal at the League's banquet tonight at the Mayflower.

One unprecedented event of the day will be opening to the public of the Naval Ordnance Laboratory at White Oak, Md., the scene of scientific tests on the Navy's wealth of firearms.

Navy Day events open to the public today include the following:

Naval Air Station, Anacostia, D. C., 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.—All types of Navy aircraft based here will be available for inspection, with experienced pilots on hand.

Naval Barracks, West Potomac Park, 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.—Guides will escort visitors through living quarters and recreation facilities of Navy enlisted men and women.

Naval Radio Station, Arlington, Va., 10 a. m. to 4 p. m.—Will be open to visitors, relaying messages to and from Washington and ships at sea.

Naval Gun Factory, 8th and M sts. se., 9 a. m. to 4:15 p. m.—Submarine, USS Dyess and LST will be open for inspection. The Deep Sea Diving School and Experimental Diving Unit will demonstrate equipment and rescue work. A destroyer and patrol vessels also will be tied up and open for inspection.

Naval Ordnance Laboratory, White Oak, Silver Spring, Md., 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.—Captured German wind tunnels, used for rocket tests, and the 10-million-volt betatron which X-rays 16-inch steel plate, are among exhibits. Special ceremonies at 10 a. m.

Naval Research Laboratory, Bellevue, D. C., 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.—Forty exhibits showing the results achieved by scientists and engineers.

National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., 10 a. m. to 5 p. m.—Lectures by Dr. Claude S. Beck, noted heart specialist, at 8:15 p. m. Visitors may see X-ray department, and demonstrations of various phases of medical science.

David Taylor Model Basin, Carderock, Md., 8 a. m. to 4 p. m.—All facilities used in hydrodynamic, aerodynamic and other fields of research will be in operation.

Naval Ordnance Plant, Alexandria, Va., 9 a. m. to 3:30 p. m.—Electroplating, machine tools, mines, precision instruments, arms and armament will be on display for the plant's thirtieth anniversary. Equipment captured during war will be shown.

Naval Powder Factory, Indian Head, Md.—An all-day celebration, including a parade, crowning of Navy Day "queen," band contests and evening review, with banquet tonight, sponsored by Secretary of Navy Post 233, American Legion.

Naval Proving Ground, Dahlgren, Va., noon to 4 p. m.—Small arms and big guns, rockets and bombs will be fired and exploded to show testing methods for Naval ordnance.

Naval Receiving Station, Anacostia, D. C., 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.—Naval Air Electronics Units display, inspection of living quarters galley and mess hall and other facilities are scheduled. Competitive drill by the Seaman Guard at 1 p. m., and football game at 3:30 p. m.

Naval Observatory, 34th st. and Massachusetts ave., 9 a. m. to 4 p. m. and 7 p. m. to 11 p. m.—Passes may be obtained by calling DE. 2723 for inspection of clocktower, telescope and 40-inch reflector.

Naval Engineering Experiment Station, Annapolis, Md.—Exhibits of work in chemistry, metallurgy, welding, mechanics of internal combustion engines and naval equipment and physics.

Navy Man's Dive

Woman Near Drowning in River Saved

A Navy serviceman dived into the Aanacostia River yesterday, pulled a drowning woman out by the hair, and restored her to consciousness by artificial respiration.

Sweatt

The woman, suffering a nervous breakdown, had jumped, believsome one was trying to kill her, police said. She is Mrs. Anna Roberts, 50, a widow, of 4510 Overlook ave. sw. Her rescuer is Lendo Sweatt, 27, of Bennettsville, S. C., an aviation metalsmith at the Anacostia Naval Air Station.

Clarence Jefferson, 35, of 1913 P st. se., was walking along the Anacostia side of the river a block above the 11th St. Bridge at 1 p. m. when he observed a woman's coat and purse on the seawall. Then he saw the woman floating about five feet off shore. Nearby, Sweatt sat in his parked automobile, taking a noontide siesta.

Jefferson shouted, Sweatt dashed to the wall, stripped off jumper and shoes and took a running, shallow dive. The woman was in about 10 feet of water.

"She wasn't breathing when I reached her," Sweatt said later. "I grabbed her hair, pulled her ashore and started giving her artificial respiration while the other fellow went for help."

Identified from a Social Security card in her purse, Mrs. Roberts had regained consciousness when a police rescue squad arrived. She was taken to Gallinger Hospital, treated for shock and exposure and held for observation. Her daughter, Mrs. Eileen Hollingsworth, with whom she lives, said Mrs. Roberts had been depressed since suffering a nervous breakdown three months ago, and often talked about "someone trying to kill her."

U. S. Near Record Of Blackest Polio Year in History

28,000 to 30,000 Cases Predicted; Cold-Weather Drop Fails to Occur

March of Dimes leaders yesterday heard 1948 described as probably the blackest year for polio in the history of the Nation.

The cases of infantile paralysis are expected to total between 28,000 and 30,000 by the end of the year, Warren D. Coss, national director of fund raising for the March of Dimes, declared. The highest previous total was recorded in 1916, when 27,763 cases were reported, he said.

The leaders, representing the District and five nearby States, met in an emergency session at the Hotel Statler to start plans for the approaching campaign, which will run from next January 14 to 30.

Coss said more than 22,500 polio cases have been reported so far this year. Moreover, the sharp decline in cases, which usually is observed as soon as cold weather sets in, has not occurred this year. Cases have dropped only gradually from 1600 to 1100 a week in recent weeks, he said.

A third strain of virus believed to cause polio has been isolated by a laboratory test, developed recently by a research worker at the University of California, Dr. Hart E. Van Riper, medical director of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis,, reported at the meeting.

If successful, the new test may greatly speed research work in finding a vaccine to immunize against polio strains, he said. It may also help in the early diagnosis of the disease.

Researchers at Johns Hopkins University have succeeded in immunizing monkeys against the two known virus strains, he said. He warned, however, that before an immunizing vaccine against polio can be found, all of the strains that cause the disease must be isolated and classified.

Plans have been made to allocate $1,750,000 in the next three years for work with 50,000 monkeys to try and find how many polio virus strains exist, he said.

New District Polio Case Sends Area Total to 231

One new polio case was reported in the District yesterday at Children's Hospital, raising the total for Greater Washington so far this year to 231, as compared with 28 for this date last year.

The case was a 6-year-old boy of the 4300 block of Verplanck pl. nw., who was admitted yesterday. The new report raised the District total for the year to 120.

Gaming Case

Four Seized In Raid on Gas Station

Three men and a woman were arrested by police vice squad detectives yesterday after a raid on a gasoline service station at 3728 Georgia ave. nw., suspected as headquarters for numbers lottery and horse race betting.

One of the men, carrying $1079 wrapped up in betting slips, according to Lieut. Roy Blick, vice squad head, was followed from the station and arrested at his home. Identified as Lawrence Accarino, 53, of 1310 Downing pl. ne., he was released under $4000 bond for a Municipal Court appearance today on charges of setting up a gaming table, permitting gaming, operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips.

At the gas station, Mrs. Lillie Rodes, 49, of 302 Emerson st. nw., wife of the proprietor, was arrested on a charge of permitting gaming and held in $500 bond, and two attendants were charged with operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips. Held in $1500 bond each for today's appearance, they are Kenneth H. Brewster, 20, of 2327 18th st. nw., and John J. Poole, 36, of 1742 U st. nw.

Numbers Charges Against 6 Dismissed

Charges of operation of a lottery and possession of numbers slips have been dismissed against Julius Smith, 47, of 54 53d st. ne.; Theresa E. Chase, 24, of 1842 2d st. nw.; Bernice Budd, 27, of 425 M st. nw.; Ernestine S. Chichester, 31, of 3529 10th st. nw.; Daniel W. Cunningham, 37, of 637 8th st. ne., and Joseph A. Chase, 1842 2d st. nw. The action was taken in District Court when Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut ruled police lacked probable cause in arresting the defendants and seizing evidence.

Numbers Slips Held Illegal in Any Form

A numbers slip is a numbers slip no matter if it is written on a bank deposit slip or grocery receipt, Judge Richmond B. Keech decreed yesterday in District Court.

Judge Keech made this decision in convicting Myer Friedburg, 59, of 807 Otis pl. nw., on four counts of operating a lottery and possession of lottery slips. Friedburg operates the Tivoli Food Market, 3400 13th st. nw.

It was testified that Friedburg accepted numbers plays from police undercover men in his store and that he made his notations on bank deposit slips, grocery slips, or, sometimes, scraps of paper and ordinary pieces of cardboard.

Friedburg's attorney, Denny Hughes, argued that Friedburg's use of unorthodox slips of paper made it clear he was not a numbers operator. Judge Keech disagreed.

Friedburg told the court he had accepted the numbers plays as a favor to turn them over to William E. McGee, 38, of 2715 Central ave. ne., a bread truck delivery man.

When McGee was arrested, police said, he had 11 numbers slips in his pocket. He pleaded guilty to numbers charges earlier this months and was given a one year probation term and fined $100.

Friedburg's case was heard without a jury. Judge Keech deferred sentencing.

School Athlete, 2 Others Plead Robbery Guilt

Three teen-age boys, one of them a Central High School star athlete, pleaded guilty to a charge of robbery yesterday in District Court before Judge Henry A. Schweinhaut.

They are William J. Denikos, 19, of 4816 7th st. nw., and James T. Triantis, 18, and his brother, John, 17, both of 200 Rittenhouse st. nw.

According to police, the trio picked up Granville V. Jones, of 3502 N. Glebe rd., Arlington, Va., outside the Deauville Restaurant, 1629 Connecticut ave. nw., about 2 a.m. June 2 and took him for a "ride" in an allegedly stolen automobile.

Jones was robbed of $55, police said, and then suffered a fractured arm and pelvis when he was thrown from the car.

Patterson Papers Before Court Monday

Opposing counsel in the Eleanor M. Patterson will contest are to appear in District Court Monday to argue over which of her private papers should be opened to inspection.

Attorneys for Mrs. Felicia Gizycka, daughter of the late Mrs. Patterson, who is attempting to break the will, have asked court permission to examine all of Mrs. Patterson's papers.

Executors named under the will have agreed to produce "any wills or purported wills" made by the late publisher-owner of the Washington Times-Herald, but opposed the request for all papers. Many of these, say the executors, are of a private nature, and some involve "confidential and competitive" operations of the Times-Herald.

After hearing arguments from both sides, the court will decide which papers should be produced.

On Monday, in a separate motion, the executors made a formal request to expedite the will trial, through setting an early trial date—about December 6. This motion will probably be argued on November 4, which was set earlier this month as a "tentative trial date," and must be changed to provide a four-week interval to permit notification of interested parties.

Mrs. Gizycka would receive $25,000 a year and specified property under the will, but would not share in the Times-Herald, willed to seven top executives.

Area News in Brief

Soldier Gets Year In Police Assault

A 22-year-old Fort Belvoir soldier was sentenced to one year in jail yesterday in Alexandria Corporation Court for assaulting an Alexandria policeman last July 24.

Pvt. Eugene Butts, Ninety-fourth Engineer Battalion, reversing his early contention in Police Court, pleaded guilty to the charge of assaulting Officer Charles Baber when Baber tried to disperse a crowd at the scene of a trouble call at Queen and N. Fayette sts.

Baber testified Butts attacked him and tried to grab his gun when Baber ordered him to move on. During the struggle, Butts was shot by Officer Wilmer Cator.

Jail Term in Rape Case

George M. Brown, 26, 1312 Corbin pl. nw., was sentenced to a prison term of one to three years yesterday for assault with intent to rape a 30-year-old mentally deficient woman. Brown pleaded guilty before Judge Richmond B. Keech in District Court.

Store Clerk Burned

An 18-year-old employe of the Giant Food Store at 2818 Alabama ave. se. suffered first and second-degree burns about the face and hands yesterday while burning wooden crates at the store's incinerator.

The youth, Joe Besfora, 1309 Potomac ave. se., said flames gushed unexpectedly from the incinerator's feeding opening. He was taken to Gallinger Hospital, treated and released.

Conviction Affirmed

The manslaughter conviction of Nixon McGuire, 36, truck driver, was affirmed yesterday by the United States Court of Appeals here. McGuire was given 5 to 15 years in prison for bludgeoning to death Mrs. Theodora Rowell, 35, in their apartment, 1919 I st. nw., last winter.

Guard Assailant Guilty

Cleveland Sheard, 22, of 321 Virginia ave. sw., was found guilty by a District Court jury yesterday of the near-fatal shooting of Fred J. Crenshaw, 66-year-old Capitol guard.

According to evidence presented by Assistant United States Attorney Arthur J. McLaughlin, Sheard was caught lurking outside the Capitol, was arrested for disorderly conduct and frisked, when two knives were taken from him.

Crenshaw testified he was leading Sheard to a call box when the defendant pulled a pistol from the front of his trousers and fired twice. One bullet landed in the guard's hip, the other in his chest, and the defendant escaped.

Women's Employer Fined

Ali Mohammed Zendbajil, owner of the American Grill at 139 B st. se., was fined $75 yesterday in Municipal Court for violating the District of Columbia hours law for women. Judge John P. McMahon imposed the fine after Zendbajil pleaded guilty. The charge involved employing women for more than 48 hours a week, more than six days a week, and failing to keep proper work records.

Widow Loses $1700

Loss of $1700 in bills by the widow of a fireman during a shopping trip Saturday was reported yesterday to police.

The woman, Mrs. Robert Lee Dunnington, 70, of 905 I st. nw., told police she had visited several stores on her shopping tour and carried the money in her pocketbook. She reported she discovered her bag missing when she returned home.

Girl, 18, Dies In Mt. Vernon Mystery Fire

Margery Mills, 18, of Engleside, Va., was fatally burned in an unexplained tragedy yesterday on the Mount Vernon estate of George Washington.

Fairfax County police theorized that the girl may have set fire to leaves while lighting a cigarette and then caught fire herself while trying to extinguish the flaming leaves.

While the others went to view Washington's tomb, the girl remained behind in her father's car.

Mills and his party had been talking to Arthur Petitt, a guard at the tomb, for about 15 or 20 minutes when a woman came running up the slope to the tomb screaming, "A woman is on fire down by the river."

Man Plunges Three Floors, Walks Away

George McGregor, 29, yesterday plunged from a third-story window to an iron porch—cracking a thick iron railing en route—and got to his feet with a grin.

McGregor

Police later reported after a hospital examination that McGregor was in serious but not critical condition. He had suffered an internal rupture.

After his plunge, McGregor climbed two flights of stairs at the rooming house, 919 6th st. nw., and by the time police arrived was making coffee. He told Pvt. George Patterson of No. 1 Precinct, he was leaning out of the window, waving to a friend across the street, when he lost his balance.

He said he head struck the railing, forcing it from its sockets. There were long scuff marks beneath the windows of the red-brick structure.

Homicide detectives were assigned to investigate. McGregor, meantime, was admitted to Gallinger Hospital for observation.

John Maddox, owner of a nearby service station, said he helped McGregor to his feet after the plunge. "He was strictly conscious," Maddox said.

Funeral Rites Are Held for Mrs. Scott, 101

Mrs. Elenore Minerva Scott, 101, who died Sunday at her Merrifield (Va.) home, was buried yesterday afternoon in National Memorial Park, Falls Church. Funeral services had been held earlier at Pearson's Funeral Home, Falls Church.

Born in Fauquier County, Mrs. Scott lived for many years near Fairfax Courthouse, where, her husband, Robert B. Scott, operated a farm. He died 20 years ago. Since about five years ago, she lived with a daughter, Mrs. Ethel Reedy, in Merrifield.

Eight of Mrs. Scott's 10 children are still living. Besides Mrs. Reedy, they are Charles, Ernest, Henry and Leamon Scott, Mrs. Annie Strickland, Mrs. Minnie Costello and Mrs. Nellie Kidwell, all residents of Washington or northern Virginia.

Plunger Rebounds For Cup of Coffee

Funeral Rites Set Today for Miss Sargent

Funeral services for Helen Louise Sargent, 68, regent for the District chapter of the Ladies' Association for Mount Vernon, who died Monday, will be held today at 2:15 p. m. at St. John's Church, Lafayette Square. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Miss Sargent was stricken at Mount Vernon Monday while attending an annual meeting of the regents. A native Washingtonian, she was the daughter of Capt. Nathan Sargent, USN, and Isabel Hill Sargent of this city.

She was one of the oldest parishioners at St. John's Church and was a member of the Altar Guild of that church. She lived at 925 Farragut Square nw.

Miss Sargent is survived by three cousins, Mrs. Enoch M. Thompson, 820 17th st. nw.; Mrs. Amy Varnum, Newport, R. I., and Robert Varnum, Pomfret, Conn.

Honorary pallbearers will be Corcoran Thom, sr., Walter Bruce Howe, Dr. Charles Marlatt, Admiral Herbert S. Howard, Carlile Winslow, Ralph B. Jenkins and John P. M. Johnston.

Capt. Cleland Davis

Funeral services for Capt. Cleland Davis, 78, USN retired, who died October 20 at Coral Gables, Fla., will be held Thursday at 2 p. m. in the Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery

Captain Davis was the inventor of numerous devices used by the Navy. He was one of the first officers in Naval history to be advanced in rank after retirement for outstanding service.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mable Young Davis, and daughter, Miss Ciell Davis, both of Coral Gables, Fla.

D. C. Set to Hospitals for Care of Indigents

Contracts covering District government payments to nine Washington hospitals for treatment of indigents have been completed and will be forwarded to Commissioner Guy Mason today.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West said last night the hospitals have already submitted bills totaling $112,688 for July, August and September, but payments have been held until the contracts are finished.

The requests were: Emergency, $28,885; Casualty, $22,950; Children's, $37,051; Episcopal, $5177; Georgetown, $6215; Providence, $11,482, and Garfield, $1107. George Washington University has asked payment for only clinic visits thus far and Columbia has not yet requested funds.

The Health Department, meanwhile, has asked the District Commissioners to request a deficiency appropriation of about $102,000 to pay Emergency, Casualty and Children's hospitals for treatments up to June 30. The present $320,000 appropriation fell short, the department said.

M. M. Plumb Dies at 65; Rites Today

Milton M. Plumb, sr., 65, retired Federal employe and an early automobile industry worker, died Monday at Gallinger Hospital following a heart attack.

Mr. Plumb, who lived at 710 Kennedy st. nw., was stricken Sunday evening at his home. He had been suffering from a heart ailment about four years, according to his son, Milton M. Plumb, jr., information officer of the Library of Congress.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. today from Chambers funeral home, 517 11th st. se. Burial will be in Washington National Cemetery.

Born and educated in Mansfield, Ohio, Mr. Plumb moved to Chicago as a young man to become a photographer. In 1906, he entered the automobile industry in Detroit, later becoming an official of a firm that painted and trimmed new cars for their manufacturer.

From 1928 through 1933 he was sales manager of the Standard Motor Truck Co. in Detroit, and then moved to Logansport, Ind., to become chief cost accountant of a firm manufacturing springs.

Mr. Plumb came to Washington in 1941 and joined the Office of Production Management as an automotive priorities expert. In 1945 he transferred to the Petroleum Administration and a year later to the United States Maritime Commission. He retired in the spring of 1947. He was a Mason and a member of the Fraternal Order of Eagles.

Besides his son, Milton, jr., he is survived by his wife, Mrs. Florence Plumb; another son, Robert, of Washington; two sisters, Mrs. Bessie Kochenderfer and Mrs. Stella Mayer, of Mansfield, and a brother, Charles Plumb, Portland, Ore. Two grandchildren also survive.

Police Search For Banker And $50,000

The Federal Bureau of Investigation last night asked police in Washington and other Eastern cities to be on the lookout for a Norfolk, Va., bank official suspected of embezzling $50,000.

The FBI identified the fugitive as Clarence M. Markland, jr., 27, office manager of the sales finance department of the Bank of Virginia, Norfolk.

Bank examiners made a routine audit at the bank yesterday, an FBI spokesman said, and found Markland's accounts $50,000 short. They found, too, that Markland was missing. A warrant was issued.

The missing bank official was believed to have left Norfolk accompanied by his wife in a 1947 gray Plymouth sedan with Virginia tags 180-360, according to the FBI.

He was described as 5-feet-11, about 200 pounds

Reception at Iranian Embassy Marks Shah's Birthday

By Elizabeth Maguire

THE twenty-ninth birthday of the Shah of Persia was celebrated at an embassy reception last evening with the Ambassador of Iran and Mme. Ali as host and hostess. Red roses, the national flower of Persia, filled the rooms, and occasional music was played by an orchestra.

It was the first time since his illness that the Ambassador received a large number of guests. The reception was black tie, at 9 o'clock and it was near midnight when the last departures were made.

Although the flagstone terrace in the garden was lighted and covered with a striped marquee, only a few hardy guests such as the French Ambassador, Henri Bonnet, and the British Minister, Hoyer Millar, ventured outdoors. Guests gathered first in the drawing room, and later in the two rooms where sumptuous buffets were served.

Roses Center Tables

Long stemmed red roses centered the buffets and coffee ice cream was served from huge silver bowls. There were salads and lobster, turkey and thinly sliced meats, and an assortment of nuts, olives and hors d'oeuvres.

As always, in gatherings at the Persian Embassy, costumes of the ladies added a colorful note. Mme. Noury-Esfandiary, wife of the Iranian Minister, wore a handsome Persian jacket of capucine color, and Mrs. M. S. Falaki, wife of the alternate director of Egypt for the Monetary Fund, was gowned in gold. Mme. Nehru, wife of the Indian Minister, added more color with her mulberry sari embroidered in silver. Her necklace of pearls, rubies and emeralds she pearls, was a wedding gift to her mother from the father of Pandit Nehru.

What They Wore

Mme. Dendramis, wife of the Greek Ambassador, dressed in full-skirted frock of black lace, chatted with Mme. Erkin, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, who was gowned in flame color velvet. And the beautiful wife of the new Egyptian Ambassador, Mme. Abdel Rahim, wore a gown of turquoise and silver.

Mme. Abdel Rahim and the Ambassador are one of the most handsome couples in the Diplomatic Corps. They have been in Washington just a month now. Both speak Oxford English as well as several other languages. The Ambassador was undersecretary of state in Egypt and envoy to Russia before his present post. They were introduced around at the party last evening by the Egyptian Minister, Anis Azer, who has been in Washington 15 years.

The Russian Ambassador, Alexander S. Panyushkin, attended the party, and with the aid of an interpreter, held lively conversation with a number of guests. The Danish Ambassador and Mme. de Kauffmann were also guests, she dressed in simple black with white ermine cape.

Among others at the party were the charge-d'Affaires of Iraq, Ahmed Izzet Mohammed, the Minister of Syria and Mme. El-Khouri, Mme. Ispahani, wife of the Ambassador of Pakistan, the Ambassador of India and Lady Rama Rau, the Assistant Secretary of State, George Allen, the Pakistan Counselor, M. O. A. Baig, Carleton Savage of the State Department, Mr. and Mrs. Elgin Groseclose, Mrs. Barnet Nover, Mrs. Palmer Hoyt, Gen. and Mrs. William H. Arnold, Baron and Baroness Constantine de Stackelberg, the Greek Counselor and Mme. Economou-Gouras and the First Secretary of the Greek Embassy and Mme. Liatis.

Rhodes Scholars Honor British Ambassador

THE British Ambassador and Lady Franks were honored at a buffet supper party last evening by the Rhodes Scholars of Washington. Over 100 guests attended the fete which was held in the Whittall Pavilion of the Library of Congress.

Dr. Frank Aydelotte, president of the American Association of Rhodes Scholars, came down from Princeton for the occasion. He escorted Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck to the party in the absence of Mr. Hornbeck, who is on a lecture tour.

Mrs. Meem Entertains For Mrs. Bristed

A COCKTAIL party was given yesterday by Mrs. Harry Grant Meem in honor of her sister, Mrs. Charles Astor Bristed of New York City. Friends of Mrs. Bristed were entertained between 6 and 8 p. m. at the Sulgrave Club.

Munros Are Hosts At Cocktail Party

THE British Minister and Lady Munro entertained last evening at a cocktail party for 40 or 50 guests. Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Parker were there, as well as Eugene Black and Andrew Overby. Also, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Christelow, R. L. Garner, British Minister F. R. Hoyer Millar, Capt. and Mrs. P. W. W. Wootten and Col. and Lady Prior-Palmer.

Philippine Envoy Is Dinner Host

A SMALL dinner was given last evening by the Ambassador of the Philippines, Joaquin Elizalde. Among the guests were the chairman of the Philippines War Damage Commission, Frank A. Waring, and Commissioner and Mrs. John O'Donnell.

Other guests included the United States Ambassador to the Philippines and Mrs. Emmett O'Neal, the Philippine Minister and Mrs. Emilo Abello, Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Richard R. Ely, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Moore and Miss Constance Delgado.

MISS FREDERICKA PATTERSON
. . . engagement announced

Miss Patterson Will Be Bride

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dickey of Tuxedo Park, N. Y., have announced the engagement of Mrs. Dickey's daughter, Miss Fredericka Patterson, to Dean Bailey Lewis, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Henry Lewis of Newtonville, Mass. The wedding will take place late in November.

The bride-elect studied at Chateau Brillantmont, Lausanne, Switzerland; Miss Nixon's School in Florence, Italy, and Bennington College, Vermont. For the past year she has been working in the Foreign Service of the Department of State. She is the daughter of Frederick Beck Patterson of Tucson, Ariz.

Mr. Lewis was graduated from Harvard cum laude in 1943. He served three years in the Army Signal Corps in Africa and India, and has been working in the Department of State in Washington.

Election Defers White House Social Season

Arrangements for the White House winter social season are bogged down in the pre-election doldrums.

Mrs. Edith Helm, White House social secretary, told a news conference yesterday she has not even discussed a program for the coming season with President Truman because his time is taken up with "more important things."

Since the President and Mrs. Truman will not return to Washington until after the election, it seems certain that no social calendar will be announced before November 2.

In any event, the official entertaining this year cannot be completed before Inauguration Day on January 20.

Former President Herbert Hoover announced the social season just before the elections in 1932 and was able to carry out the program before the late President Roosevelt was inaugurated on March 4, 1933.

But since then a constitutional amendment has advanced the inauguration date to January 20.

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

As with so many other things, we parents take for granted that children should have time sense. We forget that we learned it and expect the youngsters to have it instinctively.

So, when a child continues to play though we have told him that he must stop in five minutes, we are likely to think that he is deliberately disobeying us or at least that he is careless or indifferent about the passage of time. Actually, five minutes means almost nothing to him until he has had many experiences in which five minutes are involved.

We must not expect too quick a grasp of the idea of time but, as we are helping the child learn we must give him some definite cues. We can suggest for instance, that when the hand of the clock moves to a particular place, he should begin to put away his toys. Better still, set the alarm to signal the time we expect him to stop or to begin what we wish him to. Gradually his time sense will be learned.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Childless After Three Years Marriage, Woman Rates Herself Ignominious Failure And Loses Faith in Conventional Values

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am almost ready to believe that it were better to have a child out of wedlock, or to make a marriage because a child is expected, than to have no child at all.

After three years of marriage, Clay and I have no children; and yet there is hardly a treatise on marriage that doesn't emphasize the importance of children, whereas not nearly so much stress is placed on the importance of chastity before marriage.

It seems that my friends who have children delight in bragging to me about their progeny, and telling me that my marriage can never be truly happy without children. And added to this, Clay won't consider adopting a child, because he says he could never love an adopted child as he loves his own son, who happens to be the reason why he and his first wife got married.

Husband Rejects Idea of Adoption

CLAY also says a child creates a bond between man and wife, and I know he wouldn't deliberately say a thing like that to hurt me, which adds to my feeling that a childless marriage can never mean as much as a marriage made and a home established because of a child, with more children added through the years.

Which means more to a man: To have a wife who kept herself pure for marriage, or one who can and does give him a child even though forfeiting her self-respect? I have an empty nagging feeling that I do Clay an injustice by staying with him in a childless marriage; and I wonder if I would have been happier or sorrier if, in consequence of an affair, I had been rewarded with a child of my own?

Does a child thus created mean as much to parents as a child born of married love? Please answer soon and tell me whether I have cause to feel so bitter at having no children? Or is it a natural emotion?
F. P.

Insecurity Fuels Woman's Distress

DEAR F. P.: It seems safe to say that you aren't thinking in terms of the child's general welfare, when you toy with the idea that it were better, perhaps, to have a child out of wedlock than none at all.

The man and woman who concur in such begetting are acting irresponsibly, without rational sympathetic protective regard for "the rights of infants,"—first of which is the innocent soul's right to the dignity and initial security intrinsic in coming alive in a decently established, socially accredited parental relationship.

The fact that your cogitations entirely ignore this factor suggests that blocked spiritual capacity for motherhood, i. e., the emotionally mature disposition to love, cherish and wisely foster the growth of a child, isn't at the core of your intense preoccupation with desire to have babies.

Therefore it occurs to me that your bitter sense of frustration and uneasy self-accusation of failure in matehood obliquely refers to pernicious anxious insecurity felt in relationship to Clay, who has a tendency, I gather, to draw invidious comparison between this marriage and his first.

Childish Husband the Real Problem

THIS SEEMS apparent in his claim that a child creates a bond between man and wife, and that an adopted child could never mean as much to him as his son illegitimately conceived by his first wife. And please note in passing the falsity of his attitude. Why did he leave his wife, why is he married to you, if indeed his son created a bond worthwhile?

As I get the picture, Clay is an unstable, illogical, childish male, insatiably demanding of sentimental indulgence and ego build-up in intimacy, without knowing how to really love and reassure the woman to whom he attaches himself, as would be necessary to give deep satisfying wholesome companionship a chance to develop.

By implication Clay cites the history of his first marriage as model, when strains of maladjustment in this one are acutely felt; and for this reason you've fixed obsessively on the notion that to eclipse his first wife, you should bear a child; and you even go so far as to morbidly envy her misconduct on that score. With this lightning glimpse of the basic trouble to guide you,—my advice is to get psychiatric help in bringing full corrective insight to bear.

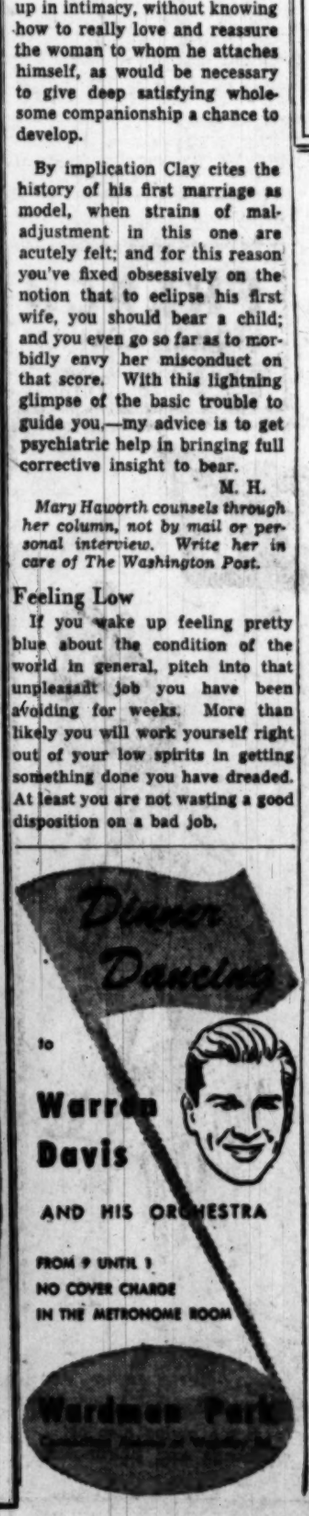
Feeling Low

If you wake up feeling pretty blue about the condition of the world in general, pitch into that unpleasant job you have been avoiding for weeks. More than likely you will work yourself right out of your low spirits in getting something done you have dreaded. At least you are not wasting a good disposition on a bad job.



Chin Up to Banish Dowager's Hump

By Ida Jean Kain

We are not making a mountain out of a molehill when we claim that a dowager's hump shouts your age behind your back! As a matter of solid fact, it tacks on a good 10 years to the age you might appear.

It's baffling . . . this hump that comes from out of the blue to perch on the bend of the neck. But there's the clew—it comes from bending the head forward over the years. The only prevention is regal head carriage. The cure is corrective exercise backed up with good head carriage.

So chin up—here is an easy-to-do set of exercises that will banish the hump and encourage erect head carriage:

I like this one best of all, for it helps to counteract the forward bending tendency which is the natural result of most of our work activities . . .

Position: Lie face down on floor, arms down at sides.

Movement: Keeping the arms straight, clasp hands behind back and forcibly contract back, shoulder and neck muscles to raise the head and chest clear of the floor. As you come up, contract and hold with the big hip muscles to fix the lower spine. That prevents swayback and helps tone the big front muscles. Hold for a second and release. Repeat three times, gradually working up to six, but relax between movements.

At this point I can just hear you . . . "Fine! I'm to drop everything, get down on the floor, and try flying." Well, just drop a stitch and take your correctives sitting right in a chair . . .

Position: Sit in straight-back chair, drop head back on shoulders and look up at the ceiling.

Movement: Very slowly roll head around toward one shoulder, and slowly roll back toward the other shoulder. Repeat four to six times, making each half roll slowly.

Now relax by hunching shoulders up around ears and slowly circling down and back . . . circle with one shoulder tip a few times, then the other, then alternating.

Best of all, get the knack of pulling up strongly with the muscles at the back of the neck—keeping that line very straight. Do that, and there will be nary a sign of a double chin or a dowager's hump . . . even though you live to be 103!

Battle for Ballots

Redskins' Right to Vote Puts the 'Indian Sign' On Arizona's Politics

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

PHOENIX, Ariz., Oct. 26.—Campaign notes. Politically Arizona is lumped with the old South and has been solidly Democratic since 1928 when Hooverian Republicanism temporarily led voters astray. This year the local campaign is for the governorship, the present Democratic incumbent, Dan Garvey, being a decided favorite over Republican Candidate Bruce Brockett. But despite this tame contest and the fact that Arizona rates a mere four electoral votes, such a Washington bigwig as Secretary of the Interior Krug has nipped in recently for a spot of speech-making. The main reason for this effort is that though President Truman is to date granted a slight edge in Arizona, Governor Dewey may win in a photo finish.

More interesting reason though is Arizona's 25,000 potential new voters—not coming-of-age kids, but Indians who have been granted the right to vote for the first time in history. And thereby hangs a fascinating tale which involves Arizona's Congressman at Large Richard Harless, who has been making headlines lately because of his intermittent attempts to marry Meredith Howard, director of the United Nations Club in Washington.

Representative at Large Harless, then running in governorship primary against Dan Garvey, managed to have reversed an Arizona Supreme Court decision which denied Indians the vote. Ironically, this seemingly quixotic action backfired and is said to have caused Harless' defeat. Belatedly, it was discovered, once given the vote, Indians were automatically eligible for Social Security.

There are some 60,000 Indians in Arizona. Reaching 64 they are entitled to $65 monthly, while any blind Indian, and there are many, rated $70, and Indian families with dependent children could draw $70 for the first and $18 for each additional papoose up to a grand total of $178. This is big money for most Indians and the chances were they would relax happily on pensions.

Program to Be Costly

THE PROGRAM, if fully processed, would total several million dollars yearly, exclusive of administrative costs. Even with the Federal Government matching $30 to the State's $35, the prospect was staggering because 78 per cent of Arizona, our fifth biggest State, is untaxable Government-owned land. Obviously most of the tax budget must be met by the remaining 22 per cent. Harless' gubernatorial chances blacked out before a compromise was made by which no Social Security would be paid before a special Government relief fund for Navajos and a smaller fund for other tribes were exhausted. All this happened near the end of the registration period. Since only a few got under the wire, the books were reopened for them.

The catch to Indian voting is having to pass Arizona's stiff literacy test. A comparatively small per cent of the 25,000 potential voters can make the grade.

Illiterate Indians, incidentally, are accustomed to voting for tribal counselors by color. Candidates for office line up outside the biggest hogan—wigwam to you and me—the first in is given a strip of red cloth and the second blue, and so on. Since Indians are crazy for red, the first in line is usually elected.

Campaigning on Reservation

HOPIS and other tribes living in the North are Republicans for several reasons—first, in 1924, Calvin Coolidge signed a law making them citizens; second, because the New Deal cut their grazing lands, thus disastrously reducing their flocks of sheep; third, they disliked John Collier, a Democrat and former Commissioner of Indian Affairs. Fewer Indians live in the South and because economic conditions were somewhat better they lean toward the Democrats.

To drum up votes, touring Democratic candidates for the first time in history stopped off for luncheon and campaigned in an Indian reservation. Another twist in the Indian political jigsaw is that two non-United States tribes, the Yaquis and Tococopahs, who were exiled Mexican citizens, live in Arizona. They applied for United States citizenship in the regular way and have been voting for years.

Though this year the Indians are not a material factor in the election, all sorts of things can happen in the future. By granting voting privileges the United States Government will have to step up a sadly neglected educational program enabling at least a respectable majority to pass the literacy test.

In Arizona's House of Representatives, there is a legislator for every 2500 voters. Eventually the Indians will probably elect one of their own race.

Meanwhile, in addition to the Indian problem, Arizona is having another headache. Because of the State's untaxable Government owned land they're trying to get some kind of fee from the Government to make up this budget deficit.

Arizona's two Congressmen are Democrats and the matter will be tough going if it has to be pressed in a Republican Congress. But anyway, on Tuesday, it'll be fun to see braves and squaws in their best bangles and war bonnets step up to the polls for the first time.

Puerto Rican League To Open New Season

The Puerto Rican American Women's League will open its fall season with a meeting, November 9, 8 p. m., at the home of Mrs. David Fernsler, 4749 Reservoir rd. nw. Guest speaker will be Mrs. Howard K. Ramey, widow of General Ramey for whom a new airport was recently named in Puerto Rico.

Other coming events according to Mrs. Addison Bomberger, league president, will be a costume ball in December.

Goodwill Guild Hears Talk by Dr. Helms

The Goodwill Guild held the first meeting of the season at 2:30 p. m. yesterday in the recreation room of Goodwill Industries with Mrs. Wiley Rutledge, president, presiding.

Dr. Henry Helms, son of the late Dr. Edgar J. Helms who founded the Goodwill Industries, told guild members the story of his father's life.

Guests of the guild yesterday were the heads of all agencies belonging to the Council of Social Agencies and members of the Federated Churches of the District.

A feature of the program was the playing of the theremin, which produces musical sounds by electrical means, by Miss Suzanne P. Davis of Baltimore.

Mrs. Willard Edwards, chairman of hospitality, was in charge of the tea which followed. Pouring at the tea table were Miss Devereux Green, Mrs. Fred Geier, Mrs. Elias Alvord and Mrs. Joseph Elward.

Party Honors Mrs. Strong on 82d Birthday

Mrs. Henry Alvah Strong, affectionately known to many young women as "Mother Strong," was the guest of honor at a birthday party yesterday given by the young women who live at Hattie M. Strong Residence Hall for Women on the campus of the George Washington University. Mrs. Strong donated the funds to build Strong Hall.

Mrs. Strong cut her eighty-second birthday cake in the lounge of the dormitory. Miss Betty Birchet was soloist during the party, accompanied by Miss Gloria Benzell.

Among those who poured at the tea table were the Misses Adeline Andrews, Marilyn Carter, Betty Ann Paisley, Marcia Roessing, Diana Roosevelt and Catherine Wolffe.

The guests included Mrs. L. Corrin Strong, daughter-in-law of Mrs. Strong; Dr. Cloyd H. Marvin, Maj. Gen. Ulysses S. Grant 3d, Harold Griffith Sutton, Dr. B. H. Jarman, John Russell Marson, Miss Myrna Sedgwick and Fred Everett Nessell.

Also Henry W. Herzog, C. Max Farrington, Miss Virginia Kirkbride, Alan T. Deibert, Miss Ruth Atwell, Lester A. Smith, John R. Busick, Dr. Henry Grattan Doyle, Dr. Elmer L. Kayser, Dr. and Mrs. Warren R. West.

The Strong Hall Dormitory Council was in charge of arrangements for the reception. The council includes the Misses Paula Powdermaker, Mary Gore, Mary Daughtrey, Peggy Mendenhall and Dorothy Schrain.

WCTU Roundtable Talks of Membership

The two-day fall rally of the District of Columbia chapter of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union at the Fourth Presbyterian Church ended yesterday morning following a round-table discussion.

Mrs. Guy F. Glossbrenner presided in the absence of Mrs. Caroline E. Coates, president of the District Union, who is away on a speaking tour.

At the round table discussion, led by Mrs. Ethel Reed, director of membership, ways to increase the W. C. T. U. membership were discussed. The goal for the Golden Jubilee National W. C. T. U. in Philadelphia in 1949 is at least five new members for every present member.

Hadassah Hears Israel Report

"It's either freedom or extinction for the people of Israel. They will not settle for anything less than independence," Mrs. Myriam Granovosky, chairman of Hadassah Youth Services in Jerusalem, told members of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah yesterday.

Mrs. Granovosky, who arrived in this country a few days ago, spoke first at an afternoon tea held at the home of Mrs. Cecil Kaufman on Chesterfield pl., and again at Washington Chapter of Hadassah's meeting held in the Jewish Community Center last night.

The speaker made a dramatic appeal for funds to carry on the work of Hadassah's hospitals in Israel. She gave a first hand account of the massacre of Hadassah's medical convoy on April 13, in which about 76 nurses and doctors were killed. She said that hospital workers have to be convoyed with armed protection to and from their work.

She said that Israel was able to survive without chaos when the British mandate ended because of careful planning and a stabilized economy.

Dr. W. M. Gewehr Speaks At Chevy Chase Club

Dr. W. M. Gewehr, dean of the history department of the University of Maryland, spoke to the members of the international section of the Women's Club of Chevy Chase yesterday afternoon on "Why No Peace in Europe."

Dr. Gewehr said there was nothing to replace the prewar balance of power since the two major countries in European affairs today, United States and Russia, were not basically European. The United States is in another continent and Russia is basically Asiatic, he said.

Mrs. Morgan Feted

Mrs. Theophilous J. Morgan, president of the Political Study Club of Washington, was honored at a luncheon in the Palladium Room of the Shoreham Hotel Saturday. Hostesses for the luncheon were Mrs. Ralph Stevens Pendexter, Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith, Mrs. Marie D. Werner and Mrs. Joseph O. Whiting.

Sorority Will Install Unit In Maryland

First Maryland chapter of Alpha Chi Omega will be installed during a three-day ceremony of the national women's fraternity, October 29, 30 and 31 at the University of Maryland. This will be the sorority's seventy-second chapter.

National officers who will install the group are Mrs. Harry H. Power, Austin, Tex., president; Mrs. Matthew Scott, Berkeley, Calif., secretary; Mrs. Raymond L. Suppes, Chevy Chase, Md., treasurer, and Mrs. Perrin G. Smith, Wynnewood, Pa., counselor. Mrs. Thomas Mountjoy and Mrs. Harold Bucher of College Park are cochairmen of the installation ceremonies.

Formal pledging will take place October 29 at the Women's City Club. Mrs. Kenneth C. Heald, Pittsburgh, and Mrs. Justin Deal, Queens Village, Long Island, sisters of the national president, will be pledged that evening, prior to being initiated into the fraternity. They will be the last of seven sisters to become members of Alpha Chi Omega.

Initiation of the charter members of the University of Maryland chapter and of Mrs. Heald and Mrs. Deal will take place Saturday afternoon, October 30, in the Kennedy-Warren ballroom. A formal banquet also at the Kennedy-Warren will follow. A reception Sunday afternoon, October 31, in the Maryland Room on the University of Maryland campus, at which members of the new chapter will be guests of honor, will conclude the ceremonies.

Residents of the greater Washington area who will be initiated include: Barbara Ray Carpenter, Lois Ann Ehlers, Doris Virginia Stephen, Flora Leslie MacKintosh, Phyllis Elaine Cromwell, Edythe Amarella Zeck, Mary Gordon Crapster and Patricia Ruth Scanlan.

Alpha Chi Omega was founded in 1885 at DePauw University, Greencastle, Ind. It has made a special project of activities for child welfare with emphasis for child victims of cerebral palsy. It also helps sponsor the McDowell Colony in Peterborough, N. H., an institution for the fostering of creative art.

For banquet reservations telephone Mrs. Carl Gerber, Otis 8047.

John C. Russell And Miss Swander Marry in Virginia

Miss Margaret Swander became the bride of John C. Russell at the Presbyterian Church of Fredericksburg, Va., October 23. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Clarence Swander of Pittsburg, Pa., and was given in marriage by her father. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. John C. Russell and the late Mr. Russell, of Fredericksburg.

For her wedding the bride wore a wine-colored suit of gabardine. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. John Shannon Mason. William Scott Russell was best man for his brother. After a motor trip the couple will live in Fredericksburg.

The bride, a graduate of Ohio Wesleyan University and of University of Wisconsin, has been director of student personnel at Mary Washington College of University of Virginia for the past five years. The bridegroom was graduated from Virginia Polytechnic Institute. He served as an officer in the Navy during the war.

Miss Berta Frey Will Speak to Potomac Craftsmen

The Potomac Craftsmen, an organization founded to revive the handcrafts of other years, will meet November 6 at 1:30 p. m. in Room 43 of the National Museum.

Miss Berta Frey, authority on textiles and a teacher of weaving in New York City, will be guest speaker.

The organization, founded in 1944, now has a membership of more than 80 men and women. The group meets once a month for lectures and demonstrations on weaving, spinning, ceramics, metal work and other handcrafts.

The organization offers membership to active weavers and associate memberships to those interested in handcrafts. The group plans to hold an exhibit of the work done by members at the National Museum next summer.

About Mildew-Resistant Paint

Our bathroom has a glass-inclosed shower. We have had trouble continuously with the paint, particularly the ceiling. A black mildew forms which can be washed off but is particularly difficult to reach. Do you know of a special paint that is resistant to dampness? I. C.

You can make a mildew-resistant paint by using zinc oxide to replace 20 per cent or more of the pigment in ordinary paint, according to the pamphlet on "Preventing and Removing Mildew," issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Will you give me a hint in regard to refrigerator odors? This has been in storage six years and now there is an odor which gets into all food from it. R. A. K.

Washing the box out with soda will help to dispel odors, and charcoal placed in the refrigerator will also absorb them. It is sold packaged for this purpose in the housewares departments of some stores. Was the machine thoroughly checked before it was put back in use, or could it be that there is a slow gas leak in it?

In regard to the article in The Washington Post on Sunday, October 9, by Evon N. Clark about "earning money at home addressing envelopes," where can one procure a list of companies who wish this work done? H. O.

You can determine what companies are in the market for such work by taking the yellow section of the telephone book and calling or writing firms listed under the classifications most likely to be interested—duplicating services, insurance companies, etc. Firms offering easy credit sometimes employ people to address brochures at home, too. Certain magazines, we understand, also employ people to address advertising matter at home. You can get addresses from copies of the magazines, and write letters of inquiry. Sometimes in the classified columns of the newspapers you find ads for people to address envelopes or do telephone calling from their homes. The latter is practical if you have an unlimited phone.

I am expecting a baby in February and am very interested in learning whether there is any organization that offers classes for expectant mothers in Arlington County. P. B.

The Visiting Nurses' Agency conducts classes for expectant mothers wherever there are enough women interested in them. One of the classes meets every Tuesday and Wednesday evening in the Shirley Homes auditorium in Arlington. If this location is inconvenient for you, you might be able to organize a group of your neighbors who would like the same instruction and then contact the V. N. A., Chestnut 3171, about setting up a class for you. A graduate registered nurse instructs the classes and there is no fee.

Can you tell me how to get coffee stain off a china cup? I rinse cup out immediately after use, but that does not seem to help. S. M. M.

Rubbing such stains with soda, or with a cloth dipped first in vinegar then in salt, will often remove them. More stubborn stains can be removed by leaving a strong chlorine bleach solution in the cup overnight.

Would you suggest what I might do with some outgrown clothing? A friend tells me there is a place in Washington that will purchase it. K. E.

A shop in Washington and another in Alexandria are among those which sell good used clothing on consignment. The telephone number of the Washington shop, located on Massachusetts avenue, is Columbia 0005. The number of the Alexandria shop, on South Royal street, is Alexandria 0649. There is also a new shop in Bethesda that sells infant-through-teen-age clothing on commission. The telephone number is Oliver 6063.

To E. S., who inquired about home dyeing of upholstered furniture: I dyed a gray cotton rep chair to dark red as follows: Using a strong solution of a product sold for home dyeing—about three times the usual—and a small hand or nail brush, I literally scrubbed the dye into the material. I left the chair by a radiator, and it took about two days to dry. The strength of the dye should be tested on an inconspicuous place. Also other colors should be at hand to modify somewhat the shade produced by covering the old colors if necessary. For instance, I added some rust to avoid a purplish hue. Of course, delicate fabric would not stand this treatment. I also did over a faded blue quilted chintz headboard with deeper blue. Since this material was not so thick or water repellant, I did not have to scrub, but more or less "flowed" on the dye. Solution should be stirred occasionally, and the family warned of "wet paint." If any light spots occur, they can be touched up when almost dry. The chair has been recovered twice since and I have never had any trouble with color coming through, which possibility bothered me somewhat. E. L. H.

NUT-SWEET acorn squash brings the flavor of autumn to your dinner table on crisp evenings. Deep green and delicately fluted outside, they're cream white, bland, and mellow within. To bake these garden beauties is a pleasure for any cook, especially if they're used for a gourmet's dish such as the one above. The recipe follows:

BROCCOLI STUFFED SQUASH
2 acorn squashes
½ pound sharp cheddar cheese
1/3 cup milk
Butter or margarine, melted
Salt and pepper
Hot buttered broccoli
Broiled bacon slices

Wash the squash; split each in half lengthwise and remove the seeds. Invert on a greased pan and bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees) for 1 hour or until tender.

Melt the cheese in top of double boiler. Gradually add the milk, stirring constantly until the sauce is smooth.

When squashes are tender, brush them with melted butter or margarine and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Arrange on chop plate. Fill center of each squash with broccoli and garnish plate with broiled bacon. Serve at once with hot cheese sauce.

American Originals Are Added To Good Food's Hall of Fame

American cooks have added their share of masterpieces to dishes in the world hall of fame, says Better Homes and Gardens magazine.

What can French soup provide in the way of stomach comfort that can't be dipped from a bowl of New England clam chowder? Or what creation can compare with a chiffon pie, resting zephyr-light in its crumb crust? Here are some American originals selected by Better Homes and Gardens.

Roast turkey, the king of the feast, is a native American. The cranberry, the king's consort, is as American as Uncle Sam. Cranberries grew wild along the sea marshes and was gathered by the Indians who sweetened its tang by stewing it with wild honey or maple sap. Today, it gets into everything, including pies, meat loaves, stuffings and muffins.

The great Oscar created another original—the Waldorf salad—to take its social bow at a society supper at the preview of the original Fifth Avenue Waldorf in New York in March, 1893.

Boston's famed Parker House is the home of the American original roll bearing its name. The origin of this folded roll concerns a young pastry chef and his sweetheart, a chambermaid. The girl was accused of theft and, furious when he heard the news, the chef picked up the risen dinner rolls he was making and one by one aimed them at the open oven. The rolls clenched in his hand took the folded shape. He slammed the oven door and left for the day. The rolls baked crisp outside and soft within. They were the only bread in the house and so were served.

Pumpkin attended the first New England Thanksgiving feast dinner. The newest pumpkin dish is pumpkin chiffon pie. The chiffon pie itself was invented in 1921 when the 16-year-old son of a Los Angeles miller—Monroe Strause—went into business with an uncle who fancied himself a pie baker. Young Strause began fooling with the pie filling and came up with something his mother said "looks like a pile of chiffon." Mere piecrust seemed unworthy to support it, so she suggested graham crackers.

Pot dinners in America change with geography. The boiled dinner, with corned beef and cabbage the soul of the dish, was the one-plate meal of the early New England housewife. Meat and vegetables were cooked together in the iron pot that swung from the crane. Even dessert was pot-cooked. Another American original, the substantial Indian pudding, was made with Indian meal placed in a flannel bag and hung to steam over the pot's side.

Shoppers By-Pass Jumbo Sweet Potatoes

Those whopping big sweet potatoes once exhibited with pride at county fairs are not the best in the opinion of housewife shoppers, studies made by the Louisiana experiment station in grocery stores in five Louisiana cities and in Chicago and Pittsburgh show. Shoppers observed in these studies generally considered size carefully in buying and chose the small or medium potatoes.

When questioned, they explained that smaller sizes took less time and fuel to cook and were more suited to individual servings. The big potatoes were too large for the average appetite.

Prices affected choice, however. When all sizes sold at the same price, shoppers chose 94 per cent of the small and medium sizes and only 6 per cent of the large size. But when the price of the big potatoes was 2 cents a pound less than that of the smaller sizes, the buying shifted to 61 per cent of the large and 39 per cent of the smaller. Even though the cheaper price attracted customers to the big potatoes, they picked out the smallest from that bin, finally leaving only the extra large.

What's New!

NOT the Community Chest Federation. This six-Chest Federation, formed in 1946 out of the war-time Community War Fund, has not changed its name or its function of combining the local Chests for one Campaign for the National Capital Area. Its name remains the

COMMUNITY CHEST FEDERATION

It's the united Community Services of Washington that's new.

This new organization combines the old Washington Chest with the old Council of Social Agencies to form a new, central, better-controlled and more representative organization.

WHAT'S NEW ABOUT UNITED COMMUNITY SERVICES?

- Its name. It has never been used before.
- It has much larger membership than both the Chest and Council which it replaces.
- It includes, in addition to health, welfare and recreational agencies, community organizations (such as Board of Trade, Labor organizations, Parent-Teacher organizations, etc.) These latter, however, do not receive any chest funds.
- It has much larger representation from the "public-at-large" than the two previous organizations.
- Its policies are controlled by an overwhelmingly larger board.
- It has a reviewing process for all member agencies.
- It has a special committee for reviewing carefully and minutely each year those agencies which are Chest-financed.
- It will be the only member of the Community Chest Federation not named "Community Chest"—but it will be the Washington member of the six-Chest Federation.
- It combines functions of two major bodies into one coordinated and more economical organization.

WHAT'S OLD ABOUT UNITED COMMUNITY SERVICE?

- It includes private agencies which are Chest-supported.
- It is still responsible for review, analysis, budgeting and general supervision of such Chest-financed agencies.
- It is still responsible for health and welfare planning for Washington and for that purpose it includes private agencies which are self-supported and it includes public agencies which are tax-supported.

AND USO IS NEW!

- This is an old friend come back to serve again as our young men are called into training service.
- It's the old USO, newly reorganized.

Nimrod Kills Wife, Faces Arrest on Hunting Charge

Hampton, Conn., Oct. 26 (AP).—Edgar Johnson, 24, of Thompson, who shot and killed his wife here yesterday while they were hunting, will be arrested on a charge of hunting deer out of season, Windham County Detective Rowe H. Wheeler said today.

State police quoted Johnson as saying he saw "something white" moving in a thicket near where he and his wife had seen a deer and fired. Johnson said he heard a scream and found his wife shot through the heart.

Wheeler said no charge would be placed against Johnson for the fatal shooting of his wife.

Potter's Election Urged by Dugan In Arlington

Daniel Dugan, chairman of the Arlington County Board, last night urged election of Lee Potter to the board "because we must have better leadership and the way to do it is to elect another nonpartisan."

Dugan was one of 14 speakers at a rally for Potter, independent candidate, attended by more than 250 persons in Lyon Park Community House, Pershing dr. and Fillmore st., Arlington.

Jay Is Stronger, But $5 Bill Is Sinking Fast

I've been urging Poet Jay Aitch to write some more jingles for us. He replies:

"Maybe I will. I'm feeling much better these days and must be getting stronger all the time. Why, just a few years ago I couldn't even lift $5 worth of groceries; now I can carry them all the way home, easy as pie."

MAIL BAG

Dear Bill:

Part of the hulk of an old B-17 has been resting for some weeks at the southern end of National Airport.

It's visible from Mount Vernon hwy., and I'm curious to know what it's doing there and why it isn't hauled away.

Russell C. Scott,
Applied Physics Lab,
Johns Hopkins University

Dear Russ:

I called the public relations office of the Air Force and the phone was answered with a crisp, "Captain Brown speaking."

"This is Bill Gold at The Washington Post," I said. "I have a question for you."

"Fine," answered the captain. "But first let me thank you for getting rid of my kittens in your Give-Away department."

When I recovered my composure, I got a complete explanation of your wrecked bomber.

It was a B-17, piloted by a colonel. Trying to land during a rainstorm, he overshot the field—then found his brakes didn't work. He was rolling straight toward the river.

So he hooked his wing into a concrete emplacement, and stopped the ship without injury to anybody aboard. But the plane was a complete loss.

The Air Force towed it to its training field, salvaged everything of value, and is now using the hulk for "crash drills." Fires are set and extinguished as training exercises.

The wreckage will remain in its present position for that purpose "until there's nothing left to burn." Bill.

REPUBLICAN ITEM

Not being much of a moviegoer myself, my knowledge of "The Dewey Story" short is confined to what I learn from Dick Coe's column and my mail.

Eileen Shanahan Waits of 3714 2d st. se., for example, wonders whether anybody has noticed that the film contains a chuckle.

The little invalid girl, who is shown in bed amidst her toys and books, appears to have been reading one volume titled "The Whitewashed Elephant."

PERSONAL NOTES

FORECAST

Constance M. Ellison of 3833 Windom pl. nw. reminds us that regardless of what the weatherman says, come November 2 it's going to be "Dewey, all day long."

HERMAN GETS BEAR FACTS

I suppose you've heard about Herman, who went to the movies and was startled to see a man and a bear come in and sit down beside him.

The man and the bear sat quietly through the picture, just like everybody else, and at the end left the theater.

Herman followed them to the sidewalk and then tapped the stranger on the shoulder.

"Mister," he said, "I'm flabbergasted. Do you mind if I ask you a question?"

"Why, no," said the stranger. "What's on your mind?"

"Tell me," said Herman, "how come you took the bear to the movies?"

"I wasn't going to at first," answered the stranger earnestly, "but he'd read the book—and he just nagged and nagged until I had to take him along.

STREET SCENE

There were fares waiting in front of the Willard, and a couple of cabs were trying to get in to the curb to pick them up. But a truck was blocking the way.

The hacker who was in the lead leaned on his horn. The truck pulled away.

But the policeman on duty nearby had also heard the blast, and came charging up with a look in his eye that spelled 'ticket for unnecessary horn blowing."

The first cab loaded his fare and drove off. The cop moved down the line to the second.

"Was it you blowing that horn?" he growled. The second hacker shook his head, jerked his thumb in the direction of a third cab (which had just pulled up) and said: "I think it was the guy behind me."

Then the second cab pulled out, and the cop grimly tackled the third driver. "Was it you that blew that horn?" he asked, wearily.

"Me?" echoed the hacker. "I just drove up, pal. You got the wrong man."

ONE OF THE highlights of the new Ingrid Bergman movie, "Joan of Arc," is the trial scene. When Maxwell Anderson, who wrote this screen adaptation of his Broadway hit, first showed this scene to Miss Bergman she suggested revisions. Anderson disagreed, and finally proposed: "If you think it should be rewritten, why don't you write it yourself?" . . . Miss Bergman went off into a corner, wrote a new trial scene and brought it to Victor Fleming, the director. Fleming read it, then said to Bergman, the writer, "Do you want to shoot it this way?" The actress in Bergman emerged, and she said "No."

The Department of Justice recently sent an investigator to Germany to check on German assets which had been hidden in the United States. He questioned a top German industrialist, who said, "We entrusted our stuff to people we knew were sympathetic," and then gave him a list of the Americans involved. This list of firms and people coincided exactly with those who had been on the Department of Justice's suspect list all during the war.

Jack McGowan heard some producers groaning about the $75,000 minimum cost of bringing a play to Broadway, and told of one of his early plays, "The Big Shot," which opened with a production cost of only $9500. The cast—which included Spencer Tracy, Frank McHugh, Gregory Ratoff, Bill Gargan and Pat O'Brien—cost less than $2000 a week. The show closed after a few days' run, and inspired Buddy de Sylvia to announce to their friends, "Don't go away for a weekend, or you'll miss one of McGowan's hits."

Henry Sherek, coproducer of "Edward, My Son," invited a New York actor to come to London to play the role of Theodore Roosevelt. "What's the salary?" the actor asked, and Sherek told him: "$35 a week, but you must supply the teeth yourself."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's note: Drew Pearson is now on a political survey through the Middle West.)

En Route Through Midwest.—Lieut. Col. Paul Douglas of Illinois, hard-hitting Democratic candidate for Senator, is getting it from both the Fascist right and the Commie left.

Douglas

The other day, GOP Congressman Fred Busbey, one of the Chicago Tribune's trained seals, unleashed a diatribe at Douglas calling him a left-winger, a friend of the Commies, and about every other political epithet he could think of. The blast was so unfair that Busbey's patron saint, the Tribune, published an editorial halfway apologizing for its congressman.

Meanwhile Douglas is getting it in the neck from the other side. Several months ago, before Douglas entered the senatorial race, Bill Miller, Wallaceite leader of the Progressive Party, approached Jake Arvey, Democratic leader of Chicago, with a proposal to run no Wallace candidates against local Democratic candidates.

"You've got some pretty good men running," Miller told Arvey, "and we'll support 'em. But we want to know whom you're going to run for the Senate. If it's Douglas we won't deal."

"Why not?" asked Arvey.

Miller hesitated. "We don't like him," he said.

"Well, what's wrong with him?" Arvey persisted.

Real truth is that Douglas is feared and hated by the extreme leftwingers because he knows their game. Enlisting as a private in the Marine Corps, Douglas rose to the rank of lieutenant colonel, was wounded, had a magnificent record. A former Chicago University professor and member of Chicago's City Council, he stands head and shoulders ahead of the Chicago Tribune's Senator Curley Brooks.

Note—A lot of people are going to split their ballots in Illinois and other Midwest States next week.

Gillette's Comeback . . .

Back in 1938, Harry Hopkins, son of an Iowa harness-maker and right-bower to F.D.R., flashed the signal that his chief in the White House would oppose the Democratic Senator from Iowa for re-election.

The Senator in question, silver-crested Guy Gillette, had opposed many Roosevelt policies, and was put first on the list for F. D. R.'s famous purge.

Result: Iowans, boiling mad, went out of their way to renominate Gillette.

Later Guy, a Democrat, became the victim of Iowa's normal Republican swing, and went back to his fields of corn and his front porch. Today, with no machine to support him, little money, and a weak candidate at the head of the ticket, Gillette appears to be staging a comeback.

With the stamina of a truck driver, he has piloted his own car all over the State, talking where ever there is a crowd, indoors or out.

Iowans pride themselves on both their voting intelligence and their voting independence. It looks as if they would feature Dewey and Gillette at the head of their ballots next Tuesday.

Surprise in Kansas

A mild mannered former Senator from Kansas is driving a tired secondhand Pontiac around his rock-ribbed Republican State, speaking five times a day, drawing good crowds and making so many friends that his opponent is getting worried.

The former Senator is George Magill, one of the few Democrats ever sent to Washington from a State where running for the Senate on the Democratic ticket is considered about as hopeless as running on the Republican ticket in Virginia. This year, while Virginia probably will vote Republican, certain Midwestern States are likely to send Democrats to Congress.

Magill's race is tougher than most—though not because he is running against former Gov. Andy Schoeppel, whom Alf Landon once called "the errand boy of the big corporations."

Magill is getting some quiet support from certain of Senator Capper's faithful friends, sore over the way Capper was pushed out of the senatorial picture.

But the main factor helping Magill is the slipping price of wheat, plus an inane remark made by Schoeppel. Asked who was running against him, Schoeppel replied:

"I'm running against some Irishman and I can't think of his name."
